Daida, Jason M., June 21, 1959 – January 9, 2013 Jason M. Daida, age 53, of Ann Arbor, Mich., but born and raised in Kahului passed away Jan. 9, 2013. He was the precious husband of Sandy and daddy of Kaily, Jeannie and Matt; loving son of Masao and Adeline. He also leaves brother Edric and was son-in-law to Hank and Mary Jo Obayashi. He was an associate research scientist and lecturer in the University of Michigan's College of Engineering in the Department of Atmospheric, Oceanic and Space Sciences and in the Department of Industrial and Operations Engineering. He was also a frequent visiting faculty member at the UM-Shanghai Jiao Tong University Joint Institute in Shanghai. He served as a faculty member at the University of Michigan for more than 20 years. Jason was well known as an "innovative, friendly and compelling teacher" who taught introductory classes for first-year engineering students. He applied his research to improve curriculum and instruction in areas of complex problem-solving, team learning and team teaching, and in the integration of teamwork, technical communications, environmental concerns and ethics. In recognition of his work, Jason earned the college's Teaching Excellence Award. Jason's research was in the theory and application of computational intelligence supporting open-ended problem solving, discovery and innovation. His work had applications across disciplines, including earth and space sciences and genetic programming. He was a founding editorial board member of the journal Genetic Programming and Evolvable Machines. At a memorial service for Jason on Jan. 18, 2013, his students shared the common sentiment that Jason not only expanded their technical knowledge but also impacted their personal lives. He was remembered for the firm yet affectionate way of "setting (his students) straight." He also allowed students from abroad to spend time with his own family during Thanksgiving and winter breaks if they didn't have the means to return home for the holidays. In a piece published in The Michigan Daily, engineering senior Carrine Yarina said though his courses were introductory, Jason showed his students that life lessons were important. "He believed that all of us had great potential, that our ideas weren't just class projects and that they were lessons for life and potential opportunities." Jason was a 1977 graduate of Maui High School. He earned his bachelor of science in electrical engineering from the University of Southern California in 1982, master of science in electrical engineering from Stanford University in 1985 and his doctorate in electrical engineering from Stanford University in 1992. Services were held Jan. 19, 2013, at Huron Hills Church in Ann Arbor. [Honolulu Star-Advertiser 30 January 2013]

DANA, JANET O., September 23 1924 – April 29, 2013 Born the youngest of five children in Wellington, Ohio, to Norwegian parents, Karl John and Judith Olsen, Janet died peacefully in her sleep at her home in Kaneohe, Hawaii, amidst the cooing of morning doves and the cackle of geckos, her family at her side. A quiet woman with a keen sense of humor, Janet lived an adventurous life. She left the small town she grew up in to join the Cadet Nurses Corp. She received her RN degree from the Grant Hospital School of Nursing in Columbus, Ohio in 1945. From there, she worked and traveled with fellow nurses around the country. From a VA Hospital in Indiana, to one in Palm Beach, Florida, she even flew to Cuba to tour the hospital in Havana. While a private duty nurse, she accompanied a couple on a plane filled with snake skins to New York. She worked at the California Hospital in Los Angeles, California, before moving to the Queen's Hospital in Honolulu, Hawaii. While working there, she joined a group of doctors and nurses who toured the hospital at Kalaupapa on the island of Molokai. She married Leo Dana and together they raised five children in Burbank, California. An avid reader, she taught all her children the basics of reading before they started school. Being a nurse, her children grew up avoiding soft drinks and white bread. At Wellington High School she showed her school pride by being a baton twirler and playing the violin in the school orchestra. She was an active letter writer who maintained correspondence with family and friends far and wide. She enjoyed art, music, animals, and gardens. Her affinity for completing the daily crossword puzzle and watching Korean dramas was passed on to her daughters. She was a philanthropist who donated to many charities. She traveled the world, yet lived a simple life. Janet was preceded in death by her sons, Karl Dana in 2000, and Mark Dana in 2006. She is survived by her three daughters and two sons-in-law, Deborah Richman of Northridge, California, Jennifer Dana and Robert Orso of Covina, California, Diane and Damon Bell of Kaneohe, Hawaii, six grandchildren, Rachel Gordon (Lonney), Dina Richman, Leo Bell, Nicole Bell, Max Dana, Jack Dana, one great-grandchild, Keith Gordon and many loving nieces and nephews. As per her wishes, a celebration of her life will be held on July 20, at Lanikai, Hawaii, where her ashes will be scattered off the coast. In lieu of flowers, donations may be sent to Hospice Hawaii, the American Cancer Society, or a charity of your choice. Her kind and gentle spirit will be missed by all who knew her. DOI, MASATO, On July 21, 2013, the life of one of Hawai'i's elder statesmen drew to a close. After a long and exceptional life, former Circuit Court Judge Masato Doi died at his home, surrounded by his family. At 92, Masato had lived a life marked by probity and deep commitment to his community. Born on February 4, 1921, in Pa`auhau, Hawai`i, Masato was the youngest child of Toyozo Dohi and Tose Muranaka Dohi. A child of the plantation, he attended Pa`auhau School and Honoka`a Intermediate School. Ever the academic powerhouse, he earned a scholarship to Mid-Pacific Institute (MPI) on Oahu. He was graduated from MPI in 1939 and began his studies at the University of Hawaii Teacher's College. Immediately following the bombing of Pearl Harbor, Masato, along with many other young men, joined the Hawai`i Territorial Guard. Following its dissolution, he formally withdrew from the University and became one of the founding members of the Varsity Victory Volunteers (VVV), an all- Japanese American group attached to the United States Army as a labor force. He served with the VVV until he and other Japanese Americans were able to enlist in the United States Army. Masato served with the 442nd Regimental Combat Team, Antitank Company, and saw battlefield action in Italy and France. Upon his discharge in 1945 he held the rank of Technical Sergeant. After the war, anti-Japanese sentiments were still prevalent on the mainland, but through the efforts of his mentors, Masato was able to take advantage of the G.I. Bill and enroll in Columbia College, where he completed his undergraduate studies, graduating Phi Beta Kappa. He then went on to earn his law degree at Columbia Law School, where he was a Harlan Fiske Stone scholar. While in school, Masato met Sachiko Yamada, who had relocated from California to New York following her internment in the Manzanar War Relocation Center during World War II. They were married in 1949 and, after he received his law degree, moved to Honolulu in 1950. Their new life included a law practice and two children, Carolyn and Philip. Before long, guided by his innate desire to help people and serve his community, Masato became an active force in Hawai'i politics. As part of the "Democratic Revolution," he was elected to the Territorial House of Representatives in 1954 and subsequently served on the Honolulu Board of Supervisors. From 1961 through 1964 he was chairman of the first Honolulu City Council. After an unsuccessful bid for mayor of Honolulu in 1964, Masato was appointed by Governor John A. Burns to the Circuit Court bench, a position which suited his gifts and nature. His values of fairness, honesty, integrity, thoroughness, and consideration of the best interests of the community resonated through this period of his career. Under his guidance as chairman of the Judicial Council of Hawaii Penal Law Revision Project, the Hawai'i Penal Code was born. In 1978, Judge Doi stepped down from the bench and returned to his private legal practice and, when able, volunteered at The Institute for Human Services, the Visitors Center of the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific, Punchbowl, and Project Dana. Sachiko, Masato's wife of 43 years, died in 1992. Five years later, at age 75, Masato married Cynthia Chi and embarked on a new chapter in his life. Apart from his family and his work, his greatest pleasure was playing golf. An active member of the Waialae Country Club for more than 50 years, he last shot his age at 90 and was still playing with his gang at 92! Over the years he also traveled extensively, often visiting friends and family in Japan. Masato was preceded in death by parents Toyozo and Tose Dohi; siblings Hatsuyo Yamamoto, Matsu, Take, and Katsu Doi, Mitsu Nakata, and Ethel Saigo. He is survived by wife Cynthia Chi-Doi, daughter Carolyn Nomura (Myron), son Philip (Cammy), grandchildren Adrian and Loren Nomura, Frederika Bain, Christopher and Kiko Doi; brother Yutaka Doi (Margie); and a large extended family of nephews and nieces. An honorable and just man, Masato Doi thought deeply and listened carefully. Though his friends and family will miss him dearly, we celebrate the life of a remarkable man whose heart and moral compass always steered him true and led him to the American Dream. In accordance with Masato's wishes, funeral services were privately held. [Honolulu Star-Advertiser 25 September 2013]

DOO, LINA JEONG, Passed away on July 12, 2013, at Queen's Hospital where she received exceptional care from the staff at Queen Emma Tower 7 Ewa. From an early age, Lina had an unquenchable zest for life. As a high schooler in San Jose, she taught herself guitar, played on the tennis team, captained the badminton team, and was a cheerleader and valedictorian. At San Jose State she somehow earned a B.A. in Biological Sciences with Distinction while spending much of her time skiing in Tahoe and performing with a rock band. With early success in the Bay Area, the band ventured to Hawaii. Here, even while facing the harsh realities of show-biz, she fell in love with the islands and with classical music, earned a B.M. from the University of Hawaii, and then an M.M. from the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. She found her spiritual home within the Episcopal Church while leading a choir of nuns at a convent near Boston Commons. Lina mused that her experience at the convent was a cross between "Sister Act" and "The Sound of Music." Returning to Hawaii, she worked with nearly every local theater in almost 100 productions, either as a performer onstage or as a music director. Lina was instrumental in bringing back the big orchestra to local theaters and was honored with numerous awards for her performances both onstage and behind the baton. She also performed in other venues including Hawaii State Ballet, Hawaii Chamber Orchestra, Honolulu Symphony, Atlanta Symphony Orchestra with Robert Shaw conducting, Michael Jackson's HIStory Tour, Jim Nabor's Christmas Shows, and a Public Television special in San Francisco. Among her many achievements as an Associate Professor at Kapiolani Community College, Lina received a Fulbright Grant to study music and culture in Argentina. As bountiful as her interests and activities were, she dedicated most of her energy to her students' success. Lina was a caring, enthusiastic, and talented teacher. She took personal interest in guiding students to discover the many opportunities available to them. She wanted her students to see the beauty in this world, especially in the world of music and in themselves, with the caveat that nothing comes easy. Lina said she enjoyed being an Electrician: She loved turning the lights on in her students' heads. Now, Lina herself has become the light on the hill for all of us to see, and it cannot be hidden from us, ever. Lina is survived by her husband Wayne-Wai Doo, mother Beatrice Jeong, and sister Pamela MacMillan. She has two grandchildren Liko and Caelinn, whom she loves dearly, and is blessed with two loving extended families in Hawaii and California. Funeral Services will be on Saturday, July 27, at St. Elizabeth's Episcopal Church, 720 N. King St. Visitation: 9:00 a.m., Music Tribute: 9:45, Funeral Service: 11:00. Aloha Attire is appropriate. Diane was born to parents Stanley and Genevieve Drigot in Chicago, Illinois in May 1948. She received an A.B. in 1969 in Conservation of Natural Resources, from Barnard College, Columbia University; and an M.S. (1972) and Ph.D. (1975) in Natural Resources (Policy, Planning, and Management) from University of Michigan's School of Natural Resources and Environment. In 1987 she was honored with the Distinguished Alumna Award from Michigan's School of Natural Resources and Environment. An early feminist, Diane was one of two women in the National Park Service to first wear uniform pants instead of a skirt as a seasonal park ranger-naturalist at Katmai National Monument in Alaska. Early in her professional career Diane held positions as an environmental policy research analyst, a university professor/environmental studies program coordinator, and an environmental impact consultant. Committed to ensuring 'practical, working knowledge', she continued, throughout her career, to mentor students through the School of Natural Resources and Environment's Alumni Association, and as an affiliate graduate faculty at the University of Hawai'i. For 30 years Diane worked in the Environmental Department at Marine Corps Base (MCB) Hawai'i. She was responsible for an integrated ecosystem approach to natural and cultural resources management, environmental restoration, and environmental documentation under the National Environmental Policy Act. Diane is widely recognized for her award-winning record of partnering with military operators, regulators, and the public to steward MCB Hawai'i natural resources while sustaining combat readiness. She was instrumental in evolving the base's Environmental Department from a staff of one (herself) and creating an award-winning department that has earned 30 national environmental awards. She received more than 20 personal awards for her community-based conservation efforts from diverse agencies (Department of Defense, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Sierra Club, Hawai'i Audubon Society, Native Hawaiian Civic Clubs, Hawai'i's State Legislature, Honolulu City Council, Kaneohe Neighborhood Board (Citizen of the Year (2003)); Secretary of the Navy (Conservation Individual of the Year (2005, 1995)); and was one of six finalists for a Service to America Medal honoring the nation's top civil servants (2004). She is remembered by many as the 'bird lady', an ardent protector of the native Hawaiian birds of Mokapu Peninsula, in part through an annual 'Mud Ops' training where U.S. Marines use 26-ton amphibious tracked vehicles to tear up pickleweed in wetlands to improve endangered waterbird habitat. Diane retired from her position as a Senior Natural Resources Management Specialist at MCB Hawai'i in December 2012. She was recently awarded a Commendation for Meritorious Civilian Service from the U.S. Department of the Navy, U.S. Marine Corps (2013) for her professional and innovative approach to natural resources management. Throughout her career, Diane made significant contributions as a volunteer both to her profession and to the communities in which she lived. Hawai'i became her home in 1977 and she spent the ensuing years working tirelessly to conserve the natural and cultural resources of Windward O'ahu. She helped develop school curriculum regarding Windward O'ahu wetlands and published over 20 articles, papers, and books regarding land use, ecosystem management and natural/cultural resources. She was a member of the Kailua Hawaiian Civic Club, and a Founding Member and past Vice-President of Kawai Nui Heritage Foundation. Diane practiced the Hawaiian art of hula for 14 years as part of Halau Mohala 'Ilima, continued to dance throughout the 'isles', and paddled for several years with the Waimanalo Canoe Club. She enjoyed traveling, walks on the beach with her German Shepherds, and staying connected with her heritage through the Lithuanian Community of Hawai'i. She leaves a legacy of integrating modern scientific understanding, Hawaiian cultural views and values, and engaged communities to further stewardship and environmental protection. She touched many directly by her work and inspired many more by her spirit. Diane truly lived 'Aloha'. Her passion and commitment is echoed by friends and colleagues – a special person who has made a real difference and whose contributions will carry forward to make the world a better place. A service in celebration of Diane's life will be held in January 2014. Condolences may be sent to the family via her sister, Karen Stone, 11600 Academy Rd NE, Apt 524; Albuquerque, NM 87111. The family wishes any contributions in Diane's memory be sent to Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center, 1100 Fairview Ave N, P.O. Box 19024, Seattle, WA 98109 (Online: www.fhcrc.org), or to a charity of choice. [Honolulu Star-Advertiser 27 October 2013]

DURNIN, PH.D., ROBIN G., 1948 – 2013 Robin Geoffrey Durnin from Long Beach, CA and resident of Kaneohe, HI passed away peacefully, surrounded by his family on March 8, 2013, while visiting his son in Arcata, CA. He was sincerely devoted to his family, his students and his professional goals. He is survived by his wife Jennifer Herring, their son William Lee Durnin (Arcata, CA), sisters Janet Caroline Seiter (Long Beach) and Mary Anne Quigley, Ph.D. (Twisp-Carlton, WA), brothers Charles William Durnin, M.D. and "Shawn" John Guyton Durnin (both of Long Beach) and numerous nieces and nephews. He was predeceased by his parents Mary Jane Guyton Durnin and William George Durnin, M.D. Through his life's work as classroom teacher, coach, lifeguard, first responder and teacher educator, Robin demonstrated his deep concern for others. He was interested in meeting the educational needs of children, youth and aspiring teachers. He was most proud of his students' accomplishments in a statewide mathematics competition called "Math Counts," a program he coached during much of his teaching career at Kamehameha Schools. Robin graduated from Long Beach Wilson High School and Claremont Men's College and served as a surgical nurse in the US Army at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Later he obtained advanced degrees in education from California State University Long Beach, Pepperdine University and Claremont Graduate School. Robin was a highly skilled athlete in water sports. In his youth he set national swim records and was recognized as "All City" and "All America" in swimming and water polo. Many sailors remember Robin as an outstanding class boat competitor who placed in local, regional and national events. He also crewed in big boat sailing regattas throughout the globe. He paddled for Waikiki Yacht Club in the masters' division in six-man outrigger canoes and worked out with the Lanikai Canoe Club Sunrise Crew. He enjoyed playing golf with his friends in California and Hawaii. While he was a teenager, Robin sailed with his father from Long Beach to Honolulu in the Trans Pacific Yacht Race. This event impacted the rest of Robin's life; he decided to make Hawaii his home. After discharge from the Army he enlisted in the US Coast Guard Reserves and served with the Captain of Honolulu Harbor. During his career as a professional educator, Robin impacted many young lives as a much-admired coach of the water sports he enjoyed – swimming, sailing, body surfing, water polo and paddling. He was a sailing coach at the University of Hawaii at Manoa and water polo coach and classroom teacher at Iolani School and at Kamehameha Schools Bishop Estate. He volunteered as an assistant to the water polo coaches at Le Jardin Academy. Robin also worked in teacher education at Claremont Graduate School, Chaminade University and University of Hawaii at Manoa. During the summers between his years of teaching and coaching, he served as a Long Beach Lifeguard for 45 years. A celebration of life will be held on Saturday, June 15, at 4:00 pm, at Kaneohe Yacht Club, Kaneohe, HI.
