Candace Mitchell Foster, tireless librarian and self-termed 'resourceress,' died at home in Kailua on December 12, 2009 at the age of 63 after a battle with an aggressive brain cancer. She was born to Lt. Col James Mitchell and his wife Charlene on August 9, 1946 in Indianapolis and after spending her childhood on Air Forces bases from Virginia to Prince Edward, Canada to Misawa, Japan, settled in Hawaii in 1968. She achieved a BA degree in English from Depauw University in Indiana, and a Masters in Library Sciences from the University of Hawaii. A life-long educator, she began her career at Waipahu High School in 1972. After a brief stint at the high school level, she found her true calling and moved to Barber's Point Elementary and then to Mauka Lani Elementary School where she founded a successful library program. After 16 happy years in Makakilo, she transferred to Aina Haina Elementary, and re-energized and expanded the library program there. Perhaps her most lasting contribution to the school was the Haunted House project- now a highly anticipated and successful annual community event where 5th grade students transform scary stories from classic literature into exciting dramatic scenes. Throughout her career, Candace Foster demonstrated a steadfast commitment to her schools and imbued countless students with a life-long love of reading and learning. Her excellence in education was recognized by several organizations, including University of Hawaii's Golden Key Society and the National Board for Professional Teaching Standards. In addition to being a stellar educator, she was also an involved and supportive mother who used her enthusiasm and artistic prowess to give her daughters wonderful childhoods full of magical birthday parties, imaginative creations and unforgettable travel experiences. Candace Foster is survived by her husband Jerry Foster, her sister Paula Tognoli, her daughters Shannon Henderson and Heather Henderson Edstrom, and her 6 month old grandson Milo. Candace willed her body to the John A. Burns School of Medicine. They will hold a memorial for her within 24 months. A Celebration of Candace
