Rillamas, called "Pierce B." by his friends, was born in Honolulu and lived in Waipio Gentry with his wife, Cynthia. Landscape architect Jim Hubbard, who often used his services, described his work as "top notch," and said a love of nature was always evident in his finished projects. Hubbard said Rillamas did landscaping for many beautiful Honolulu residences but may have done his best work at the historic Spalding House in Makiki Heights, which now houses The Contemporary Museum. "He was the most engaging rascal we ever did business with," said Honolulu Advertiser Chairman Thurston Twigg-Smith, who owned the Spalding House before it was turned over to the museum. Twigg-Smith said Rillamas worked for four years refurbishing the grounds and gardens and then returned to work on the property again after it was turned over to the museum. "Pierce was good at taking on impossible projects," Twigg-Smith said. "You wouldn't believe the size of the trees be moved onto the museum grounds." Rillamas served in the U.S. Army during the Vietnam War and received a Purple Heart. He was a member of the Chozen-ji Dai Honzan in Kalihi and the North Honolulu Tenrikyo Church.
