YAMAMOTO, TSUNEICHI, former president and general manager of Hawaii's only Japanese English daily newspaper, died on March 22, 1993. He was 92. Yamamoto was born in Okayama, Japan, and moved to Hawaii in 1917. Two years later, at the age of 18, he was a reporter for Hawaii Hochi, a Japanese language newspaper. Yamamoto left the newspaper business in 1934 to become general manager of the Honolulu Sake Brewing Co., a post he held until 1941 when World War II broke out. Like about 2,000 other Hawaii residents of Japanese ancestry, Yamamoto was sent to an internment camp on the Mainland. He returned to Hawaii after the war and became publisher of the Pacific Family Graphic Magazine. In the late 1940s, Yamamoto started a Japanese language program broadcast on radio station KULA. In 1954, he was invited back to Hawaii Hochi – which had become a Japanese-English newspaper- where he would become its editor/general manager, vice president and finally president. He retired from the paper in 1967, but was an adviser for many years. Reizo Watanabe, a close friend and colleague, described Yamamoto as a humble man who could turn little issues into big news. “He was amazing,” said Watanabe. “I think as a newspaperman he was very qualified.” Yamamoto was also the editor of “The Rainbow, a Bridge from East to West ... Past to Future,” a book commemorating the 70th Anniversary of the Honolulu Japanese Chamber of Commerce, which he helped organize in the 1930s. Yamamoto was a longtime supporter of Japanese language education and was the founder of Mitsubakai, a classical Japanese dance and musical teacher's organization. Perhaps his most visible legacy, however, are the cherry blossom trees planted in such places as Kokee, Kauai, Kula and Waihee on Maui and Waimea on the Big Island. Yamamoto was a member of the numerous other Japanese organizations including Shigon Shu Kyodan, United Japanese Society, Hawaii Kiin Okayama Jin Kai, Hawaii Kyoiku Kai and Makiki Nippongo Gakko. He is survived by his wife, Chiyoko Yamamoto; daughters, Mrs. Robert (Tamoko) Tsuyemura, Mabel and Jacqueline; three grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. A memorial service will be held at 6 p.m. Friday at Hosoi Garden Mortuary. The family requests casual attire and no flowers. [Honolulu Advertiser 1 April 1993]
