Okada, Elsie Hisako Ogata May 31, 2007 Elsie Hisako Ogata Okada, 88, of Waimea, died on May 31, 2007, in Honolulu. Elsie was born in Camp 2, Makaweli and attended Makaweli school, graduated from Waimea High School and later attended Phillips Commercial School in Honolulu. She married her high school sweetheart, Ichiro Okada, who passed away in 1992. She is survived by her children Anne, Ranceford and David; six grandsons; and two great-granddaughters. During World War II, Elsie and Fumiko (Okada) Shiraishi helped run J. Okada Store while Ichiro, George, Motonobu and Ford were away with the 442nd RCT in Europe. Elsie was active in the Waimea Christian Church, teaching Sunday School, being a member of the Evangelism Committee and singing in the choir. She participated in conferences sponsored by the Hawaii Conference of the United Church of Christ. She served her community as a Girl Scout leader, Y-teen leader and a volunteer at the Waimea Hospital. Elsie loved travelling with Ichiro and even rode the rapids with him on the Colorado River twice — through the Grand Canyon and Cataract Canyon. She was a good conversationalist and would have been comfortable “talking story” with the Queen of England. A memorial service will be held at the Waimea United Church of Christ Stone Church on June 16 at 9 am. Aloha attire requested. [Garden Island 4 June 2007]

Onaga, Sharnell, April 3, 2007 Leukemia did not keep Sharnell Onaga from having her third child Dec. 4, but she lost her fight to the disease Tuesday. The 38-year-old Onaga was diagnosed in June with myeloid leukemia during a blood test when she was nine weeks pregnant. Doctors advised her to end her pregnancy to begin treatment against the aggressive cancer, but she would not do it. "Miraculously, the leukemia was relatively dormant until Sarah was born," family spokeswoman Cissy Boyer said. Friends and family signed up more than 1,000 new potential bone marrow donors in a vigorous campaign, but a match was not found for Onaga, who had been on the Bone Marrow Donor Registry for three years. In October the registry gave her unexpected news: She was a match for someone else. "I'm so bummed I couldn't help," she told the Star-Bulletin at the time. "It's like winning the lottery, they say." After her baby was born, Onaga had chemotherapy at the Queen's Medical Center, then went to the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center for a cord blood transplant. The transplant was delayed by an infection, and "the leukemia returned full force," Boyer said. "Her wish was to come home at that point when they said there's nothing more." She returned last Thursday and spent several days at her Kapolei home with family and friends before she was admitted to Queen's on Saturday night. Her family includes her husband, Clifton, a vice president of family-owned Amazon Construction, and their daughters Kaila, 13, Rachel, 2, and Sarah, 4 months. Boyer said Onaga is "enjoying a well-deserved rest not only from the rigors of the past year, but for her lifetime of selfless giving and service as a wonderful wife, great mother and fabulous friend." "Sharnell's message was one of hope," Boyer said. "She never lost her joy or that inner beauty that comes from trusting in God." Funeral services are pending. Tax-deductible donations are being accepted for the Onaga children's education fund through Soroptimist International of Honolulu, a tax-exempt nonprofit organization. They may be made payable to SI Honolulu -- FFSO and mailed to Friends for Sharnell Onaga, P.O. Box 700814, Kapolei, HI 96709. (Honolulu Star Bulletin 5 April 2007)

Ono, Susumu May 4, 2007 Susumu Ono, 76, who implemented many of former Gov. George Ariyoshi's ideas for self-sufficiency and land planning, died May 4 at Nuuanu Hale. Ono served as Ariyoshi's first chief of staff after Ariyoshi was elected governor in 1974. Ariyoshi said he had watched Ono when he was an analyst with the state Department of Budget and Finance, on loan to the state House and Senate budget committees. "I know of no other person who was more familiar or knew state government better," Ariyoshi said. In 1979, Ariyoshi, embarking on a series of controversial proposals to limit growth and even population, tasked Ono with the job of working out the details as chairman of the state Board of Land and Natural Resources. Ariyoshi recalls that Ono chaired a public hearing on geothermal projects on the Big Island. "He said it went until 4 in the morning, and I asked him why he stayed so long. "He said, 'I didn't want anybody to feel they hadn't had an opportunity to speak.' "That was the kind of person Sus was. He was very thorough, but he was also very sensitive and fair," Ariyoshi said. Ariyoshi, who served as governor from 1973 to 1986, initially as acting governor, said Ono was always the one he counted on. "I can't overemphasize how much I trusted him. He was a man of great integrity and sensitivity," Ariyoshi said. Ono retired in 1986 as Land Board chairman after 26 years with the state government. He was a budget officer and analyst in the state Department of Finance for most of his government service. After retirement from the state, Ono worked as a consultant for Gov. John Waihee and the developers of Aloha Tower Marketplace, according to information from the family. Ono was born in Kahuku. He graduated from the University of Hawaii with a bachelor's degree in business administration. After service in the Army, he used the GI Bill to attend the University of Illinois, where he earned a master's degree in industrial relations. He is survived by wife Tsutayo "Sue," son Scott, daughter Debra Schriber, brother Katsuto and sisters Edito, Margaret Matsuoka, Machie Kubota and Patsy Akagi. A funeral service will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday at Hosoi Garden Mortuary. The family requests casual attire and no flowers. Burial in the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific, Punchbowl, will be private. [Honolulu Star Bulletin 24 May 2007]
