Tongg, Michael Alan Poi Wo (1944-2007) Attorney Michael Alan Poi Wo Tongg was not only a champion outrigger canoe paddler and a crew member on historic voyages of the double-hulled sailing canoe Hokule'a, but also a foster parent to scores of children. "He was a steersman in the canoe and a steersman in the lives of the children in the court," Oahu Circuit Judge Michael Town said. Tongg died of lung cancer at his home on July 13. He was 63. Tongg was an attorney who handled Family Court cases for more than 30 years, representing parents and children in trouble with the law. Tongg and his wife, Janice, who had four children of their own, became foster parents to more than 50 children whose lives were severely chaotic and disruptive, friends say. "He was not only a steady force in the lives of the kids, but he also was a healer. ... He practiced therapeutic justice," Town said. "Mike was admired by Family Court judges and by his colleagues." Tongg was also leader in the canoe paddling community. He paddled with Waikiki Surf Club crews that won the Molokai Hoe in 1966, 1969 and 1973. He served in the past as president of the Oahu Canoe Racing Association, Hawaiian Canoe Racing Association and International Polynesian Canoe Federation. "If anyone said they wanted to learn how to paddle, he would be there immediately to teach them," said

Hannie Anderson, president of the Oahu Hawaiian Canoe Racing Association. Tongg traveled to several foreign countries to promote canoe paddling, including Australia, Canada, Japan, New Zealand, Fiji, Palau, Western Samoa, Tonga and Rapa Nui (Easter Island). "He gave his time whole-heartedly. ... He coached many, many paddlers," Anderson said. Anderson said during his tenure as president of the Hawaiian Canoe Racing Association for nearly 20 years, membership doubled. "He left a big void in our association. ... It's a big loss to the canoe community." Tongg also served as president of the Polynesian Voyaging Society, the organization that supported the operation of the Hokule'a, and was a crew member on many of its voyages. Hokule'a navigator Nainoa Thompson said Tongg was among a handful of men selected for the toughest legs of voyages, because he put others before himself and could be relied upon to save others even while risking his own life. "That's at the highest level of leadership. We lost one of the great ones," Thompson said. Thompson said Tongg saw the Hokule'a as a vessel to heal a wounded Hawaiian culture. A memorial service will be held at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel on Aug. 12 with visitation at 10 a.m., followed by services at 11:30 a.m. The scattering of ashes will be from the Hokule'a at Tongg's surf break near Diamond Head at 3:30 p.m., followed by a reception next to the Hilton Lagoon at the Anuenue canoe club at 5 p.m. Aloha attire is requested. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to "Friends of Michael Tongg" at any First Hawaiian Bank branch or mailed to 5653 Pia St., Honolulu 96821. Tongg is survived by wife Janice, daughters Malissa Kaawa and Stacy, sons Michael Jr. and Matthew, brothers Tenney and Ronnie, sisters Geraldine Kam and Trudie Kiessling, grandson Kainoa and numerous nephews, nieces and cousins. Terpstra, Chester, April 12, 2007 The Rev. Chester Terpstra celebrated the centennial of Protestant missionaries' arrival in Micronesia by following in their footsteps to work as a pastor in Pohnpei for 11 years. "He had a great love for Pohnpei," said the Rev. David Hirano, interim pastor of Central Union Church, and the islanders "thought a great deal of the Terpstras." Terpstra "was very much like a pioneer in Micronesia," said the Rev. Nelson Kwon, a retired United Church of Christ minister. "He established a pastor school. The plan was to train the Micronesians so they could do the work of ministry. It was one of his great contributions." Terpstra, 89, died last Thursday in Sequim, Wash., after a long illness. He was former pastor of several churches in the United Church of Christ denomination here, including Central Union Church, Kaimuki Evangelical Church, Makiki Christian Church and Waimea Christian Church on Kauai. He served as Hawaii conference minister of the denomination from 1968 to 1978. Terpstra was elected to the top post after "tumultuous years" in which some UCC churches were at the forefront of anti-Vietnam War activity and other social issues. "He brought some stability to the conference," Kwon said. "He was a little more conservative in his views. He also brought financial stability." Hirano said Terpstra was instrumental in the development of the Craigsides apartment towers on church property in Nuuanu. "He really made a good impact on the conference, not to be forgotten." Kwon said, "One of his aims was to train local people in Bible knowledge. It was something he stressed a lot." Terpstra taught evening Bible classes for years in Honolulu. Terpstra was born in Allegan County, Mich. He graduated from Wheaton College and earned a doctorate at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. He and his wife were brought to Hawaii in 1945 by the Hawaiian Board of Missions. He is survived by wife Margery and sons Marshall, Michael and Merrill. Friends may write to them at 1844 Woodcock Road, Sequim, WA 98382. A memorial service was to be held today at the church in Kolonia, Pohnpei, where he served for 11 years. A memorial service in Honolulu will be held at a later date. (Honolulu Star Bulletin 19 April 2007)

Tuttle, Daniel Webster, 81, Dec. 23, 1006 Daniel Webster Tuttle, Jr., the political pollster and educator who pioneered political polling in Hawaii, died on Dec. 23. His wife of 59 years, Elsie Tuttle, said he had been battling pneumonia at the Arcadia Retirement Residence. Tuttle became well known in Hawaii politics after arriving in 1950 as an associate professor of political science at the University of Hawaii. He was best known for introducing nonpartisan political polling to Hawaii. "At the very core he was an advocate of pure democracy. He was a great believer in the democratic process," said Tom Coffman, an author and former political reporter at the Star-Bulletin in the late 1960s and early '70s. "He prided himself on being bipartisan or helping both Republicans and Democrats understand what was going on. He saw himself as an educator," he said. Respected by Hawaii's politicians, he was often sought out for his political advice and gave dozens of speeches a year, his wife said. During the 1960s, Tuttle gave political commentary with Bob Sevey on KGMB and covered the national political convention, his other passion, in 1960 and 1964. "He was like the signature of election night," Coffman said. "He gave by far the most intelligent commentary, nobody has come close." He also wrote a column for The Honolulu Advertiser from 1959 to 1984. "He was the first kind of independent pollster that studied public opinion and the changes in public opinion," said Gerry Keir, a former Advertiser editor. "He was very well regarded as a pollster and also as a lobbyist for the education community." "He was one of the guys you'd talk to to try and get a sense of what was going on. And he always had pretty good insights," Keir said. Politics was always his great love, more than his love for baseball, his wife said. When he was about 10 years old, she said, Tuttle listened to a speech by the mayor of Chicago, then told him he disagreed with him, to which the mayor signed an autograph, "to the man who disagreed." "My husband was always interested in politics," she said. Tuttle retired from UH in 1966 and became the executive director of the Hawaii Education Association. He returned to UH in 1971 to teach political science. About the same time, he opened a polling firm called Public Affairs Advisory Services, and worked with his students to conduct door-to-door polls. After retiring in 1987, Tuttle again became the executive director of the Hawaii Education Association, holding the position for about 11 more years. "He was not a jolly person, but he was always thinking and enjoyed life," Elsie Tuttle said. Besides his wife, Tuttle is survived by sons Daniel Tuttle III and David B.H. Tuttle; daughter Kay Hancock of North Bethesda, Md.; and grandchildren Parker Tuttle and Nanea Tuttle. Services are set for 3 p.m. Saturday at Central Union Church. (Honolulu Star Bulletin 2 January 2007)
