Marjorie "Margie" Hanson Stone, 68, former Honolulu Star-Bulletin reporter and columnist, died last Saturday Sep 21, 1996 at her Kaneohe home. She had been ill since suffering a stroke about a year ago, her husband, F. Warren Stone said. Also, she contracted an ailment on a trip to Nepal 10 years ago that caused her severe pain but was never identified, he said. She was considered ahead of her time, pioneering movements for women's rights and venturing into the newspaper and publishing businesses.

"Her whole life, she thought of herself as a journalist, whatever she did," her husband said. She was managing editor for the Stanford Daily newspaper in 1947. She worked for the Star-Bulletin from 1948 to 1950 covering a political beat -- then a job usually done by men. She also worked for the newspaper's former magazine, writing a Miracle Mile column that Cobey Black had made popular. She wrote for the Army in Tokyo in 1952-1954, then edited Valley Newspapers in Los Angeles from 1954-56. She returned to the Star-Bulletin as reporter and columnist from 1956-1958. Stone said he dragged her away from the paper to help him when he started Hawaii Tourist News. "I begged her. She didn't want to leave the Bulletin. She loved it there." She continued as a feature writer, as well as editor and publisher, of the Tourist News. Besides that publication, the Stone Publishing Corp. turned out the Hawaii Travel Monthly, Guide to Oahu and publications for many organizations, such as the State Federation of Labor, AFL--CIO, Civil Air Patrol, the U.S. Navy submarine base at Pearl Harbor and private companies. By 1985 they had sold off everything except a Japanese Guide to Hawaii, which they kept. "And it was her idea," her husband said. "We were negotiating with a guy over price and she said, 'Keep the Japanese Guide.' I said, 'OK. You always seem to be right.' "That was the brightest lady you ever met." She remained president of Stone Publishing Co. until her death. "I was the gofer," her husband said. "She was managing. I would do what she told me to do." He was initiated into the Hawaii Publisher's Hall of Fame but said the honor belonged to his wife. The couple worked together in business and real estate development. She managed Hanson properties in Santa Maria, Calif., where she was born.

She contributed to many causes, her husband said. "She had a checkbook that was very liberal." She was an early feminist with major concerns about zero population growth and planned parenthood. "As she said, 'We're a finite spaceship,' " her husband said. Survivors include a daughter, Tracy, an architect in Los Angeles; and son Peter of Honolulu, involved in managing properties here and in California. Her life will be celebrated from 4 to 6 p.m. tomorrow at the Oahu Country Club. No flowers; donations to charity of choice. Casual attire. [SB 30/09/1996]
