Smith, Nolle (1920-2006) an outstanding running back at the University of Hawaii and member of the school's Sports Circle of Honor, died Saturday at St. Francis-West Hospice. He was 86. Smith, the Rainbows' team captain, is best known for leading Hawaii to a 20-6 victory over Willamette to complete UH's season in 1941 with an 8-1 record. But the game and Smith's 100-yard rushing performance were overshadowed by the events of the following day -- Dec. 7 -- when Pearl Harbor was bombed. Smith immediately joined the Army. He fought in the Pacific campaign, including at Guadalcanal, and attained the rank of captain. After the war, the Roosevelt High School graduate returned to Hawaii and became a football coach and teacher at Maui High School and later at Kaimuki High School. He later retired as director of Maui parks and recreation. Smith is survived by daughters Kim Gonzales, Tsulan L. Husted and Kuuipo T.C. Smith, son Nolle R. Smith, Pete Oct. 3, 2006 Family, friends and fans of legendary Kalaheo High School basketball coach Pete Smith can only wonder what might have been. Just three years after retiring from coaching, Smith died yesterday morning at Castle Medical Center after a long battle with cancer. He was 52. News of his passing spread quickly, jolting the Kalaheo community and prep basketball circles across the islands. Last year, former Radford basketball guru Jimmy Alegre died. Many colleagues and peers of Alegre echoed the same praises yesterday for Smith: Compassionate. Generous. Funny. A family man. "He'll be missed by his former players and by many, many students, by the hundreds," former Kalaheo athletic director Lee Cashman said of

Smith, who taught physical education until retiring in 2003. Smith had taught and coached since graduating from the University of Hawaii. His 18-year coaching career included three state crowns and a remarkable .845 winning percentage. The success includes a 76-game win streak between 1993 and 2000. That prompted Cashman to later say, "Pete Smith IS Kalaheo basketball." Kalaheo's most recent state championship team won the title in 2001. That team featured guards D.C. Daniels and Skyler Wilson, and 6-foot-6 swingman Ikaika Alama-Francis. Wilson, a nephew of Smith, moved from California to play for his uncle. His legacy includes sons Alika and Kea. Alika Smith, an All-State player at Kalaheo, went on to star at UH and is currently an assistant coach with the Warriors. Kea Smith played at Kamehameha and is now a manager for the Warriors men's basketball team. UH coach Riley Wallace learned of Smith's passing when Alika called early yesterday morning. Wallace knew Smith for many years, going back to Smith's assistant coaching stint under Merv Lopes at Chaminade. Later, he got to know Smith better when Alika joined the program. "Family man that he was, you could see the caring, the love that he had. This is a tight-knit family," Wallace said. "I followed his (Kalaheo) teams closely. He was one of the top coaches in the game. He loved coaching and working with young people. He took teams to camps on the mainland." Wallace recalled the recruiting process with Alika Smith. "He left it all up to Alika, and he was always there to help. As a parent, he never interfered," he said. In his eyes, Smith was a basketball purist. "He just coached. There were no politics in him," Wallace said. "We lost two of the best the last couple of years with Jimmy and now Pete. I feel for the family." Dwight Toyama was a football coach at Kaimuki during the early years of Smith's dynasty at Kalaheo. As he elevated to executive director positions with the Hawaii High School Athletic Association and Oahu Interscholastic Association, Toyama viewed Smith with respect and admiration. "He definitely raised the bar, raised the standard of coaching for coaches not just in OIA basketball, but in all of Hawaii. He was a real humble guy, real classy," Toyama said. "He served many people as a mentor." "He was a great man." (Honolulu Star Bulletin 18 October 2006)

Steele, Dwayne (1934-2006) Friends of Dwayne Steele loved to watch when the tall haole from Kansas would stand quietly among a group of Hawaiians speaking in their native language and, without warning, stun them by joining the conversation in fluent Hawaiian. "His passion was for everything Hawaiian," said Oz Stender, his friend for more than 40 years. "I was the brown guy and he was the white guy, and everywhere we went I would introduce him as my brother." And if anyone addressed Stender in Hawaiian, he would refer them to Steele to interpret. R. Dwayne Nakila Steele, a philanthropist, Hawaiian scholar and founder of construction company Grace Pacific Corp., died Wednesday afternoon at his Nuuanu home with Stender and family members at his bedside. Steele, 71, had been fighting bone cancer for more than a year. Another friend, Walter Dods Jr., chairman of BancWest Corp. and First Hawaiian Bank, said, "He was the most Hawaiian man I've ever met. He came here 50 years ago and really embraced the culture." Fluent in Hawaiian and several other Polynesian languages, Steele played slack-key guitar and ukulele and sang in Hawaiian. He also translated Hawaiian newspapers from the 1800s and funded a project to put them online for students of Hawaiian culture. "He learned to play from Johnny Almeida," said Dods. "He would play and break out into song and not the usual tourist songs, but the beautiful old ones." Attorney and longtime friend Jeffrey Watanabe said, "His loss leaves a hole in the heart of our community." Watanabe issued a short biography that said, "Steele is best known in business circles as a visionary and strategic thinker, stringing together corporate acquisitions which made Grace Pacific one of Hawaii's largest construction companies." Steele made employees stockholders as he grew Grace from a company of 50 employees with $8 million in annual sales to one of 500 employees and more than $135 million in annual sales. Steele, according to Stender and others, used his wealth in quiet ways to help others. For example, when the late Iz Kamakawiwo'ole wanted to break out into a solo career, he approached Jon de Mello of Mountain Apple Records and said he had two financial backers. Steele and Stender put $25,000 into the project, which became Hawaii's only platinum album, "Facing Future." De Mello said the two refused to take any profits from the recording, instead putting their share into a trust fund for Iz's daughter. The only mention of their contribution is in the liner notes with a "mahalo" to "The Wizard of Oz and the Man of Steele." Stender said, "Dwayne was such a sharing, giving, silent man. You would never know all the people he has helped. He never wanted to be recognized." Born in Kansas and raised in Colorado, Steele graduated from the University of Hawaii with several degrees in civil engineering. He later earned degrees in the Hawaiian and Samoan languages and in Hawaiian history. Steele is survived by wife Marti and six children: Chris Steele of Honolulu; Donna Jones of Topeka, Kan.; Flo Doyle of Denver; Jenny Steele of Oklahoma City; and Aito and Elizabeth Pualani Steele, also of Honolulu. He was predeceased by another daughter, Terry. A reception celebrating his life will be held Wednesday from 5 to 8 p.m. at the Oahu Country Club. The family asks that in lieu of flowers, contributions be made to Aha Punana Leo (Hawaiian Immersion School) at 96 Puuhonu Place, Hilo, HI 96780; and the Awaiaulu Hawaiian Literature Project at 2505 Pali Highway, Honolulu, HI 96817. (Honolulu Star Bulletin 21 April 2006)

Stone, Scott Jan. 10, 2006 AUTHOR Scott Stone wrote 29 books, starting with a Vietnam War novel and winding up with a history of the Royal Hawaiian Band, before succumbing to cancer last week. He was 73. The Tennessee native moved to Hawaii in 1958 and worked as a copy editor, then as a foreign correspondent in Asia, and later as a speech writer for Hawaii politicians, according to his son, Erik. Stone also had a long military career, starting with the Korean War, where he took part in clandestine operations. "His life was like fiction," said former MidWeek columnist Eddie Sherman. "He was a real adventurer, behind-the-scenes operator, brilliant. His military records indicate all that." Stone published his first book, "The Coasts of War," in 1966 after serving in Vietnam. It was considered the first Vietnam War novel, his son said. In 1970, Stone won the Edgar Allan Poe Award for his suspense novel "The Dragon's Eye." His recent works included "From a Joyful Heart," published in 2001, a prize-winning biography of aviation pioneer-songwriter Alex Anderson, and "The Royal Hawaiian Band" in 2004. "The guy was definitely big time, meaning I think he'd have been a better-known author if he was promoted properly," Sherman said. "He sure had the tools and talent to be as big as any of the novelists today." Stone was born in Duck Town, Tenn., and graduated from East Tennessee State University, after taking time off to enlist in the military. After Korea, he served on sailing junks in Vietnam with the Navy and remained on extended active duty until he retired as a Navy commander in 1992. "He was a very quiet sort of man, not the flashy kind, a very good writer, a very good reporter," said Sanford Zalburg, who was an editor at the Honolulu Advertiser when Stone worked there, and remained friends with him. "He was suffering from cancer for years, and fought it off and fought it off," Zalburg said. "He was a gallant fellow. The ordinary person would have given up in defeat." Stone, who died Jan. 10, is survived by his wife, Walelu Stone, son Erik Stone, daughter Alison Beddow, two grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. A service will be held at the East Hawaii Veterans Cemetery in Hilo, but the date has not been set. (Honolulu Star Bulletin 18 January 2006)

Stremming, Warren E. (1921-2006), a longtime Freemason and World War II veteran who later spent 21 years running the typesetting room for the Hawaii Newspaper Agency, died Feb. 17 at his Kailua home. He was 84. Before coming to Hawaii in the 1960s, Stremming was a journeyman printer on the mainland, eventually working in the composing rooms of more than 50 newspapers including the Washington Post and San Francisco Chronicle in an era when in-demand printers and typesetters moved around frequently. Stremming, who was born in Burlington, Iowa, later became superintendent of composing at the Des Moines Register before relocating to the islands. While at the Register, he received a presidential citation for learning sign language so he could hire the hearing-impaired, family members said. Stremming told them it was actually easier to communicate with his staff via sign language in noisy pressrooms. Stremming was a Freemason for a half-century, belonging to local and mainland chapters of that fraternal organization, and a member of the Aloha Shriners. He joined the Hawaii Newspaper Agency, the now-defunct joint venture that handled printing, advertising and circulation for the Honolulu Star-Bulletin and Honolulu Advertiser, in 1965. Stremming later helped HNA make the transition from traditional lead typesetting to electronic methods and was known for his easy-to-work-with demeanor. "He was real quiet. He was a street kid raised in the Depression who didn't say much but was still very personable," said stepson Bud Bowles, of Honolulu. During the war, Stremming served as an Army paratrooper, earning the Bronze Star for meritorious service in Europe, family members said. He is also survived by wife Jean; daughters Holly of Kailua and Roxann Ringnald of Fort Worth, Texas; son Tom of San Jose, Calif.; stepdaughter Sally Bowles Rogers of San Diego; four grandchildren; and one great-granddaughter.
