Llewellyn "Tiny" Kanakamaikai Wailehua Sr. of Kailua, business agent for Operating Engineers Local #3, died Tuesday Sep 23, 1997 in Reno, Nev. He was 57. Although he first made news as a Kailua High School football player, Wailehua was dedicated to his life's work. "He's been an operating engineer in the field for 33 years," said Adrian Keohokalole, the Operating Engineers Hawaii representative. "He was very dedicated to his job as far as being a foreman out in the field. He was pretty much a top hand in operating just about every type of equipment that there was out there." Before he became a business agent, Wailehua worked for the union in training apprentices, Keohokalole said. In his teen years Wailehua excelled in Kailua's football backfield and won an Oahu Interscholastic Association Hall of Honor Award, graduating from Kailua in 1959. In 1958, the Star-Bulletin named the 5-foot 11-inch, 170-pound Wailehua as a Rural Oahu All-Star for the third straight year. "Llewellyn Wailehua, Kailua's great all-around quarterback, won the ... spot on the starting team ... by a substantial margin," sportswriter Bill Kwon wrote. "Wailehua, named to the Star-Bulletin All-Star team for the third straight time, ran and passed for 17 touchdowns to spark Kailua this year." In later life the athletic Wailehua also served as a karate instructor. He is survived by wife Margaret; sons Wesley and Llewellyn "Tyke" Jr.; daughters Kelly Jones, and Rosemary and Andrea Wailehua; and brother Clark. Funeral services will be at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday at Hawaiian Memorial Park Mortuary. Call after 9 a.m. A scattering of ashes will follow services. No flowers. [SB 26/09/1997]

John Walker, - Fifty years ago, when United Airlines completed its inaugural flight to Honolulu and helped launch the modern age of Hawaii tourism, John Cornwell Walker was one of many business leaders and dignitaries who attended the event. Walker, a former president of the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce, often had a window seat to the major historical changes shaping Hawaii's business community. Yesterday Jul 17, 1997, Walker died of natural causes at his home in Kula, Maui. He was 91. In 1925, Walker began his career at the Oahu Railway & Land Co. and worked his way up to become the company's general manager and vice president. Walker later became vice chairman of Dillingham Corp., which built Ala Moana Center, and was chairman of the Hawaii Visitors Bureau in 1952 and 1953. Along the way, he served on the corporate boards of First Hawaiian Inc. (then called Bishop Bank), American Factors Ltd. (or Amfac), and Andrade & Co. Ltd. An avid sportsman, Walker was well known in Hawaii as a polo player, playing actively until the start of World War II.

Walker's family history was intertwined with Hawaii's modern history. During the 1850s, his paternal grandfather, John Walker, and his maternal grandfather, William Cornwell, at different times served as ministers of finance to King David Kalakaua. He is survived by son John C. Walker Jr.; daughter Jill Walker Stevens; and stepdaughter Carol Austin. A memorial service will be held Monday at the family home in Kula. In lieu of flowers, the family asks that contributions be made to the Kapiolani Health Foundation. [SB 18/07/1997]

Ellerton E. "Al" Wall, a Honolulu native who became a California-based regional vice president of western operations for Chevron Corp., died Aug. 31, 1997 at his San Diego home. He was 84. He worked for Chevron 43 years, having joined it in 1934, at age 21, in Honolulu. It was then known as Standard Oil of California. In 1940, he was named branch manager at Kahului. After World War II broke out, his wartime contribution included being responsible for providing aviation gasoline for aircraft carriers and cargo ships. Following the war, Wall rose rapidly to positions as Standard Oil district manager in Oakland, regional manager of the Fresno region in 1955, general sales manager in 1956 and vice president of marketing in 1957. He was named president of California Oil Co., an East Coast subsidiary, in 1958. In 1963, he became Southern California regional vice president and regional marketing manager, based in Los Angeles. He was the son of Walter E. Wall, who served as surveyor general of the then-territory of Hawaii, and Edith Wall. A Punahou graduate, he was a high school football, track and swimming star and was rated a top javelin thrower. He later attended the University of Hawaii and University of Oregon, and was graduated from the University of Southern California. In his years in Los Angeles, Wall held numerous leadership posts with community and civic organizations. He is survived by his wife of 62 years, Virginia; daughters Anne Randolph and Janet Dietz; son Steven, eight grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren. A private ceremony was held in California. The family suggests donations may be made to the San Diego Hospice or the donor's favorite charity. [SB 10/09/1997]

Adeline D. Whisenand, 87, of Aina Haina, a Red Cross worker for some 20 years who also was very active in church and community, died Tuesday Feb 4, 1997 at home. She was among those who insisted that the Honolulu International Center, now the Blaisdell Center, should be more than a sports arena. "Six of us said there shouldn't just be a sporting center. It had to be for the community as a whole," she had said. She was one of a number who envisioned an opera house, noting how opera productions were held mainly in high school gymnasiums. "We got together with Mayor (Neal) Blaisdell and he agreed that there should be both,” she said. Her community service earned her a Star-Bulletin Good Neighbor Award in 1976. “Mrs. Whisenand often opens her home to her ‘neighbors,’ giving shelter for the night or even longer when they need it,” her citation said in part. “The neighbors she helps start out as strangers to her -- a Vietnam refugee family stranded at the airport, a woman with domestic trouble, a motherless 2-year-old girl whose father needed time to make baby-sitting arrangements.” All this she did in a very quiet and selfless way, wrote a fellow volunteer in the FISH organization, a Christian group giving round-the-clock counseling and aid. “FISH is just one of many organizations in which Mrs. Whisenand serves as a good neighbor,” the citation went on. “A pet project in years past, which combined her avid interest in hiking and plant life with the desire to be of service, was the work she did with Girl Scouts and Camp Fire Girls. She gave conducted tours of the botanical highlights of various Oahu hiking trails to troop leaders of those groups.” Born in Los Angeles, she vacationed in Hawaii in 1929 and 1930 and stayed at the Moana Hotel, surfboarding and falling in love with Waikiki Beach. Later, she married architect George Whisenand in Los Angeles and they moved to Hawaii in 1950. The Whisenands built their home in Aina Haina in 1950, where Adeline Whisenand resided until her death. George Whisenand died in 1983. Adeline Whisenand worked for the American Red Cross from 1951 through the early 1970s. She was a member of the Trail and Mountain Club, Waialae Country Club and active in Waikeola Congregational Church in Kahala. She also traveled extensively, circling the world three times. She is survived by daughter Julianna W. Smith; adopted daughter Sarah Nordwall; four grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren. A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at Waikeola Congregational Church. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Waikeola Church.

Bruce E. White, who expanded University of Hawaii teacher training to provide the bulk of Hawaii public schoolteachers, died Wednesday Dec 31, 1997 in Portland, Ore. White, a retired university administrator, reached the age of 100 on Nov. 29. Born in North Yamhill, Ore., White led an active life that included service as an Army corporal in the American Expeditionary Force in World War I in France, and as an administrator with the University of Tehran in Iran in 1966-67. His education included a 1923 bachelor’s degree from Willamette University in Salem, Ore., and a 1932 master’s degree and 1935 doctoral degree from the University of Washington. After serving as a teacher and principal in the state of Washington, and a year as an education professor at the University of Alaska, White moved to Hawaii where he was an assistant professor at the UH in 1936-41 and director of admissions in 1941-43. He served as dean of student personnel in 1943-48 and dean of the teachers college in 1948-56. "In the past most of Hawaii's high school teachers have come from the mainland," White said, on becoming the teachers college dean. "Our goal is to develop our high school program to the point where we will be able to train teachers on any level." White was the UH dean of faculties from 1956 to 1963, the year he retired as dean emeritus and senior professor of education. He ended his long education career in Iran. His activities also included service as a member and secretary of an advisory committee on education for Guam and the Pacific Trust Territory in 1947-52. He belonged to the Masons, Rotary Club and Central Union Church in Honolulu. Retiring to Oregon, White and his late wife, Grace, spent their later years traveling to more than 70 countries. He is survived by son Bruce H.; two grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren. There will be no services. Memorials may be made to Planned Parenthood

Ernest H. Willers, who was Hawaii’s top veterinarian for 40 years, left a legacy of health and safety in the dairy, livestock and poultry industries and in the public health of residents today, his colleagues say. “He was very much a leader in the veterinary profession,” said Honolulu veterinarian Allen Miyahara. “He was a mentor to everyone in regulatory medicine, very astute.” Willers died May 23, 1997 at his Aina Haina home at the age of 90. He retired in 1972 after 40 years as territorial and state veterinarian. He was a founder of the Blue Cross Animal Hospital. The emphasis of his work with the Department of Agriculture was overseeing the meat-producing industries, but he also had an important impact on public health, said former public health veterinarian John Gooch. “For many years he was a one-man gang defending the anti-rabies quarantine. We are free from rabies because he was successful in defending it. He was instrumental in expanding meat and poultry inspection to all islands, so people knew local meat and poultry were from healthy animals slaughtered in a healthy manner,” said Gooch. Miyahara recited a litany of diseases found in island animals that were eradicated while Willers directed the state veterinary program. They included anthrax, hemorrhagic shipping fever, black leg disease and anaplasmosis in cattle and brucellosis and hog cholera in pigs. “We had tuberculosis in our cattle. Hawaii was declared TB-free through his efforts and direction.” Gooch recalled an infection called “Molokai sick” that debilitated local beef cattle. Willers “was a bright guy with an inquiring mind. He and his staff identified the cause: The cattle at certain times of the year were eating nothing but kiawe beans, and it sickened them. “Vets owe him a debt of gratitude too,” said Gooch. “He modernized the Veterinary Practice Act in the early 1950s, which established a way of licensing and monitoring veterinarians and resulted in an improvement in quality of veterinary service.” Willers, born in Seattle, graduated from the University of Washington Pullman School of Veterinary Medicine. He was honored as veterinarian of the year by the American Veterinary Association. He was a past exalted ruler of the Elks Club. He is survived by his wife of 56 years, Dorothy B.; son Jon T.; daughters Lani D. Lofgren and Wendy W. Lagareta; six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m. Thursday at the Elks Club. The family asks that contributions be made to the Hawaiian Humane Society in lieu of flowers. [SB 31/05/1997]

Philip Winchester - Kalihi born and Kalihi raised, Philip Winchester spent much of his life helping the youth of his community. A coach, mentor and business owner, Winchester died Friday Jul 4, 1997 at home. He was 75. “He was ‘Coach,’ ” recalled daughter Denicia Trinidad. A young man with three small children, Winchester built a gym in the carport of his Kalihi home in 1948 and invited neighborhood kids to work out there, Trinidad said. The youth would use his handcrafted exercise equipment, and more important, have a safe place to gather and discover their self-worth, she said. And there was football. He coached the Kalihi Pop Warner “Bad News Bears” to a national championship in 1960 and was line coach for the Farrington High School football team from 1958 through 1963. One of his young charges— “Skippa” Diaz—went on to become the head football coach at Farrington and a role model for Kalihi youth in his own right. A 1939 Farrington graduate, Winchester also worked as a welder at the Pearl Harbor Naval Shipyard, was a 24-year employee of the Honolulu Board of Water Supply, and owned Winchester’s Chlorination Inc. He also was an avid bowler and tandem surfer. Last March, Winchester was honored with a personal message from fellow Farrington alumnus, Gov. Ben Cayetano, lauding him for a “lifetime of achievement and service to others.” “You have truly been a distinguished and productive citizen of the state of Hawaii,”

Cayetano wrote. Born in Honolulu, Winchester is survived by wife Ruth; daughters Sybil Blythe, Caroldean Mansfield and Denicia Trinidad; sons Gary and Jim; five grandchildren; and a great-grandchild. Donald H. Wolbrink, 85, city planner and landscape architect, whose work included master-planning the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific at Punchbowl and other major Hawaii projects, died Feb. 22, 1997 following surgery in Shelton, Wash. He will be buried in Punchbowl at a later date. Wolbrink came to Hawaii as a Navy officer in World War II. Later, he joined the first planning firm in Honolulu, which opened in 1947 as part of a nationwide network known as Harland Bartholomew & Associates. Its first functions here were to master-plan what now is the Waialae-Kahala residential area for Bishop Estate and also Kahului, Maui, for Alexander & Baldwin. For Campbell Estate, it drafted the original master plan for Campbell Industrial Park on the Ewa Plain and the new second city of Kapolei, which sprang up in recent years next to Campbell Industrial Park. After statehood, the same firm also helped draft Hawaii's statewide Land Use Law. Wolbrink, longtime manager of the Honolulu office, continued the firm as Wolbrink & Associates from 1964 on and deactivated the firm in the late 1980s. In 1994, the American Planning Association, Campbell Estate,

Gov. John Waihee and Mayor Frank Fasi showered commendations on Wolbrink at the annual Campbell Estate Koa Awards party. Wolbrink had a planning philosophy: "The joy of planning resembles the joy of cooking in terms of mixing the condiments together to get it just right," he said. That same year, the Wolbrinks relocated to Shelton, Wash., for retirement, after 47 years in Hawaii. Born in Ganges, Mich., Wolbrink received bachelor's and master's degrees in landscape design from the University of Michigan. He was with the National Park Service from 1934 to 1941 and with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Missouri Valley from 1941 to 1944. He served on active duty with the Navy from 1944 to 1946. Later in 1946 and 1947, he represented Harland Bartholomew & Associates in Midwest cities as a field representative, moving to Hawaii later in 1947. In charge of all Hawaii work for Bartholomew & Associates, he also played a large role in developing master plans for all Navy activities on Oahu, also for Kwajalein and Midway and Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station. Wolbrink is survived by wife Florence S.; daughter Gretchen W. Bond; and three grandchildren. Donations in his name may be made to the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Bill Wood - A memorial service will be held for Bill Wood, longtime editor of Hawaii Business magazine, at 6 p.m. tomorrow at the Thurston Chapel of Punahou School. A private burial will take place later on the Big Island. Wood died of cancer Oct. 22, 1997. He was 66. His career also included founding what is known today as Island Business Magazine. He also served the Wall Street Journal as its Hawaii correspondent. He was one of the first recipients of the Media Person of the Year award given by the Hawaii Chapter of the Public Relations Society of America. "Bill was certainly highly respected not only for his thoroughness in reporting and researching his articles but also because of his understanding of business and financially related issues and his abilities to put those stories into perspective for the readers," said Stafford Kiguchi, chapter president. "He'll certainly be missed." Born in Costa Mesa, Calif., he earned a master's in journalism at Stanford University after returning from service as an Army officer in Germany. In the late 1950s, he took a position with the San Francisco bureau of the Wall Street Journal. June 1972 found him in Hawaii, where he worked briefly for a Japanese business magazine called Economic Salon. He joined Hawaii Business magazine that fall as an associate editor, becoming its editor in October 1973. Wood left Hawaii Business in early 1981 to found the Hawaii Real Estate Investor, a monthly tabloid for out-of-state readers and investors. Honolulu Publishing Co. purchased the tabloid in 1984, changing the name to Hawaii Investor, keeping Wood on as an editor and writer. The publication later became Island Business. Wood left Honolulu Publishing in 1992 to write books. Wood is survived by former wife Carol; sons Brian and Chris; daughters Hillary Wood-Chan and Alexandra Holgersen; and two grandchildren. In lieu of flowers, the family suggests donations to the Society of Professional Journalists Hawaii Scholarship/Internship Fund, P.O. Box 3141, Honolulu 96802. [SB 31/10/1997]

Norman Joseph Wright was employed as a publisher's marketing manager but it was his second career as an actor that he loved best. He kept a resume of every movie, television and stage experience over a 30-year span. They included parts in World War II performances starring theater giants Maurice Evans and Judith Anderson and roles in several "Hawaii Five-0" episodes. Wright died in Honolulu Oct. 28, 1997 at the age of 79. He had acted in Honolulu Community Theatre productions for 30 years and continued as its historian long after he gave up the stage. The organization, now called Diamond Head Theatre, applauded his 50 years of dedication in 1990 by selecting him as one of the first five people for its Hall of Fame. The Hawaii State Theater Council gave him the 1987 Pierre Bowman Award for his contribution to local theater. "He went back practically to the beginning" of the community theater, said Helen Topham, actress and former University of Hawaii drama professor. In post-World War II days, Wright was one of the four people who ran the volunteer theater. His last local stage appearance was in the role of Welsh poet Dylan Thomas in a 1969 production of "Dylan." He had bit parts in movies including "The Devil at Four O'Clock," "Twilight of the Gods" and "From Here to Eternity," and in the Hallmark Hall of Fame television movie "Inherit the Wind." "He came out here to get involved in acting," said Nini Dinmore, a family friend. "It was his main interest and his hobby, although he didn't earn his living that way. There were a lot of people he met playing bit parts, and stayed good friends with and stayed in contact." Wright retired in 1983 as international sales manager with University of Hawaii Press. He started with East-West Center Press before it merged with UH Press and formerly was the Pacific-Asia representative with Feffer and Simons book distributors. Royden Muranaka of UH Press said: "He did a lot of traveling throughout Asia and the Pacific. It was hard after the war, and he got along well, made good friends with Asians. Now I go on those trips 25 years later, they all remember him and ask about him." Wright was born in Newport, Pa. He served in the U.S. Army during World War II. He is survived by a hanai brother, Richard Dinmore; and five godchildren. A private burial service will be at 2 p.m. tomorrow at the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific, Punchbowl. The family suggests that in lieu of flowers, memorial contributions be made to St. Francis Hospice or Diamond Head Theatre. [SB 06/11/1997]
