Kam Tai Lee, the last treasurer of the Territory of Hawaii and first treasurer of the State of Hawaii, died Oct. 15, 1997 in Aiea. He was 92. From 1937 to 1943, he also served five sessions as a member of the territorial House of Representatives. A Republican, he introduced legislation for the first Unemployment Compensation Act and a Territorial Scholarship Act. "Kam Tai was a very genial person," recalled Edward Greaney, former Honolulu newspaper columnist and retired state official. Lee managed the territorial treasurer's office just before statehood, at a time when new capital was coming into Hawaii, Greaney said. For example, the tycoon Henry J. Kaiser was here, he said. "New investment was coming in, in anticipation, I believe, of statehood triggering better economic times," Greaney said. Lee resigned as treasurer shortly after Hawaii became a state. Friends said he wanted to stay on, but resigned when he learned Gov. William Quinn had someone else in mind. Lee was born in Waikane. He received his early education at Waiahole School and at Mid-Pacific Institute, graduating from the University of Hawaii in 1929. After graduation, Lee worked briefly as editor of an English section of a Chinese-language newspaper and then took employment with the Service Cold Storage Co. for two years. He was with Liberty Bank of Honolulu from 1934 to 1953. He also served as trustees for the Blood Bank of Hawaii and the Honolulu Community Chest. Additionally, he belonged to the Honolulu Police Reserve and the Hawaii National Guard in World War II. Lee is survived by wife Helen; daughters Marcia Lau and Betsy Styskal; and sons Jan and Dane. Randolph Martin “Randy” Lee Jr. - A taste of old Hawaii charm that lured resident regulars as well as returning visitors was the hallmark of hotel and restaurant executive He was general manager of the prehigh-rise Halekulani Hotel for 16 years and owner of the Willows Restaurant for 13 years before its 1993 closing. Lee, 65, died Monday Sep 8, 1997 in St. Francis Hospice. Friends didn’t wait for the eulogy to share their memories and anecdotes about the gracious innkeeper. They prepared a memory book of remembrances and vignettes for a benefit tribute last year sponsored by friends when they learned of his struggle with cancer and medical bills. “The outpouring of love was just unbelievable,” said Dick Rodby, president of Kemoo Farms. “He was Hawaii’s Princess Diana - he touched so many lives.” Entertainer Nalani Olds said that despite his frail health, Lee “could not help acting the gracious host. He was tired but he never let up on being cordial, he wanted to stand up to greet everyone. “He always had the knack to make people feel welcome and special,” Olds said. “One of his qualities, when he engaged you in conversation, he only spoke to you. He was really interested, he remembered what you said, he remembered your children by name.” What kamaainas and visitors remember best is the “kamaaina luncheon” that Lee instituted at the old Halekulani, reincarnated as the “poi luncheon” at the Willows, the setting for many people’s special celebrations. The format was Hawaiian food served with class and Hawaiian entertainment with impromptu special appearances by well-known entertainers. “Those luncheon shows were more like a family luau, not a show,” said Rodby. “He got me started doing them at Kemoo; Randy was more refined - ours were more Haleiwa style.” Olds said she was 16 when she began dancing hula at the Halekulani oceanside shows, and numerous other entertainers were given a start by Lee. Under Lee’s administration, cuisine at the Halekulani restaurants and the Willows received awards from gourmet and travel magazines. He was honored by local restaurant and hotel associations. “When things were going good, the training table for St. Louis (athletes) was the Willows. They could go there and have a meal anytime,” Olds recalled. Lee was a 1950 graduate of St. Louis High School. He earned a bachelor’s degree in social sciences at Georgetown University. Before joining the Halekulani, he worked at Hawaiian Airlines, Hotel Hana on Maui and the Mauna Kea Beach Hotel on the Big Island. He is survived by his wife, Sunny Jean; sons Randolph M. III, Michael, Jon David and Peter; daughter Lori Anne; and seven grandchildren. A Mass will be said at 1 p.m. Monday at Star of the Sea Church. Friends may call after noon. Inurnment will be private. The family asks that flowers be omitted and casual attire be worn. [SB 10/091997]

Jack You Hong Leong - Entrepreneur Jack You Hong Leong, owner of Dave's Ice Cream Inc., died from a heart attack on Saturday Aug 16, 1997. He was 71. Leong started the ice cream chain in 1982 because of his craving for something sweet. It was named for his son. Known for its unusual island flavors, such as green tea, lychee, mango, poha and kulolo, the store is at 14 locations on Oahu, in Arizona and Saipan. Leong, who was the company's chairman, always said that customer's preferred flavor over fat. He was also owner of JEL Inc., a distributor of hardware items; JRD Enterprises Inc., a distributor of telephones, answering machines and other electronics; and Process Equipment Pacific Inc., a distributor of equipment for sewage and waste-water treatment facilities. In early 1997, he started Wings Over Hawaii, a company formed to breed and sell butterflies to an international market. Butterflies, according to a close friend, was one of his passions. Leong was also chairman and director of the ill-fated Mid Pacific Airlines, which closed in 1988. The active businessman graduated from McKinley High School in 1943. He started his career with Pan American World Airways, where he worked in the air-freight department. After leaving Pan American in 1949, he started Hawaiian Freight Forwarders, which he operated until 1952. In 1952, he joined Airborne Freight Corp., where he was in charge of international sales. He left the company in 1969 to start Mutual Distributors, a wholesale hardware company. He also spent his career as president of Capital Air Freight, and in 1968, Leong was named Honolulu senior vice president of the internationally based Airborne Freight Corp. Leong started his last freight company, Eden Air Freight, Inc., in 1988 with long-time colleague Lawrence I. Rodberg from California. Leong was active as a parent and benefactor at St. Louis High School which his three sons attended. He established two scholarships at St. Louis, the Edith Leong scholarship for Hawaiian studies and the Jack and Edith Leong Educational Grant, a $1,000 scholarship for two incoming students given each year. Mae Loebenstein - There's a request list of specific music to be performed at the Monday service to celebrate the life of Mae Ulalia Loebenstein. The longtime entertainer and kumu hula, who died Monday Jun 30, 1997, left her own instructions for "lots of singing and dancing and no sad music." Loebenstein, 86, also requested that "na punahele," the lead dancers of her halau, Ka Pa Hula O Kauanoë O Wa'ahila, be listed with her survivors "because they were family to her," said her granddaughter Maelia Loebenstein. Her dancers, kumu hula from other halaus and other Hawaiian entertainers participated in an continuing concert outside her Queen's Hospital room during her final two days after suffering a aortic aneurysm. Friends may call after 9:30 a.m. Monday at St. Patrick Church, where a Mass will be celebrated at noon. Burial will follow in the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific, Punchbowl. Alan "Turkey" Love, longtime Waikiki beach boy, died yesterday Feb 10, 1997, not knowing of recent controversy over the removal of his beach concession at Kahanamoku Lagoon. Launa Love said she never told her 77-year-old husband of the dispute while he was in Kaiser Hospital with pneumonia. "(Yesterday) was the day that they told us to get off the beach, but we had lawyers, so we didn't have to go," she said, adding lawyers Richard Gronna and John Goemans are helping her. "Hopefully, things will work out for the best, and I'll still be able to operate down there in Turkey's name," Launa Love said. "He was so much full of fun and life, and he loved the old Hawaiian ways," she said. "He was a wonderful father, husband and friend." A Japanese firm now owns the recently closed Waikikian Hotel and Tahitian Lanai, and Aston Hotels and Resorts helps look after the property. Aston said the longtime beach concession offering kayaks, pedal boats and air floats would have to go, and news stories brought out community support to keep the beach concession in place. Love had operated the concession for over a quarter-century under an informal agreement with the previous owners. Love would arrive at the beach concession at 7 a.m. seven days a week. His freckles, said to resemble spots on a turkey egg, earned him his nickname. His boyhood idol was Sam Kahanamoku, Duke Kahanamoku's brother. "I learned everything from Sam," he had said. "I watched him all the time." Love grew up in Waikiki and became a part of the golden era that brought famous celebrities to the famous beach. "Those were the coat-and-tie days," he later said. "And before that there were the hat, coat and tie days." "He's definitely one of the legendary old-time Waikiki beach boys," said Grady Timmons, author of the book "Waikiki Beachboy." Love became Henry Kaiser's beach boy when Kaiser opened the Hawaiian Village, Timmons said. "I think he spent about 50 years on the beach." Before moving to the lagoon, he was a beach boy fronting the Royal Hawaiian and Moana hotels, Timmons said. "He was known as one of Waikiki's best canoe steersman." His sister was Winona Love, the famous hula dancer, and he had a brother on the beach known as "Porky" Love, both of whom preceded him in death, Timmons said. Love also is survived by daughters Tisha and Winona Love. A public service will take place between Hilton Hawaiian Village and Kahanamoku Lagoon at noon Saturday. Friends are encouraged to bring their surfboards, canoes and boats. Following the service, the ashes will be scattered at sea.

Ellen Chun Lum was an accomplished oil painter who designed the original prints for what came to be known as "aloha shirts." "I think she'd rather be remembered as a landscape oil painter," Arthur Lum said, referring to his mother, who died Feb. 22, 1997 at her Honolulu home. She was 82. "To make a living, she had to do commercial art," he added. In 1936, Ellen Lum's hand-painted designs of the malolo (flying fish), kihikihi (Moorish Idol fish), a Hawaiian man fishing at night by torchlight and an abstract tapa print were transferred onto Fuji silk short-sleeve shirts and sold exclusively by King-Smith Clothiers for $1.95 apiece. Ellen's brother, Ellery Chun, called them "aloha shirts" and registered the name. The primary colors of the original shirts were brown, black, navy blue, cobalt blue and green. Contemporary versions of the original prints—especially malolo and kikikihi—are featured on shirts today. "If she hadn't done the first production runs, I just wonder what we would be looking at today," said Arthur Lum, a Punahou School graduate like his mother. Ellen Lum earned a degree in home economics from the University of Hawaii the same year aloha shirts made their debut. She was, however, very interested in art and fashion design. Encouraged by artists Millard Sheets and Huc-Mazelet Luquiens, Lum attended to Chouinard School of Art in California. Her paintings have been on display at the Honolulu Academy of Arts. Lum, however, had to become a working artist to pay bills. She bought the family clothing business founded by her father, Chun Kam Chow, from Ellery in 1950 and relocated King-Smith Sportswear to Kalakaua Avenue. Lum ran the business until her retirement in 1963. Other survivors include a sister, Wai Chee Yee. Private services have been held.
