STANLEY "KAMMY" KAM Stanley Y.W. Kam was six days shy of his 84th birthday when he died peacefully in his sleep during the early morning hours of Feb 6, 2005. His vitality and will to live were best expressed in his 23 year battle with cancer. Born in Paki Village in Canton, China on Feb 12, 1921, he arrived in Honolulu at the age of 9 where he grew up, and then was drafted into the army before he could finish his high school education. In 1948, he married Choy Fu Wong in Hong Kong and began their life together in Honolulu. With determination and hard work equaled by that of his wife of 57 years, they raised 8 children and gifted them with the basics of life and a full education. In business, Stanley was co-owner of Kam Heong Market on Lanakila Avenue since 1947. He was known as "Kammy" to friends and customers for 58 years. Stanley's wife and children are most proud and appreciative of all his efforts and successes. He will forever be remembered for the humble, kind and caring husband, father, brother and grandfather he was; for his love of animals; for his multiple talents at building and repairing everything around the house and store; and for his intelligence and foresight in business. Stanley is survived by his wife, Choy Fu; his children, Mrs. Susan (Jessie) Yan, Malcolm, Ruby, Marla, Mrs. Cynthia (Gary) Kam-Flynn, Karen, Kathleen, Stanley Jr. (Weihong); sister, Deborah (Urbano) Buccat; grandchildren, Leslie and Peter Yan, Kristen and Ethan Kam.

Hanayo Kami, who came to Hilo in 1915 as a picture bride from Hiroshima, Japan, and lived to be 110 years old, died Jan. 18, 2005. Albert Kami, the middle of her three sons, said his mother didn't do anything special to live such a long, healthy life. "It's good genes," said Albert Kami, a Hilo resident. "Besides that, it must have been her diet. She ate a lot of vegetables." His mother also did not smoke or drink alcohol, he said. Kami was born Sept. 15, 1894, in Hiroshima. She traveled by boat to Hawai'i to marry 21-year-old Kanichi Kami, who was a cane planter for a sugar plantation. Hilo became home for the young couple. They raised three sons, who are now grandfathers themselves. Albert Kami said his mother was a quiet woman and a homemaker who cooked traditional Japanese foods for the family. For the past two decades, his mother lived at the Life Care Center of Hilo. She was active until about 10 years ago, he said. The family held private services Saturday at Dodo Mortuary, Albert Kami said. In addition to son Albert, Kami is survived by sons Hideo and Ralph, both of Hilo; six grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. [Adv Jan. 30, 2005]

Lamond Kanohookalani Kanakaole, 36, of Salt Lake, passed away June 23, 2005 at Kaiser Foundation Hospital. Born in Honolulu on January 6,

1969. Survived by his beloved wife of 12 years, Dana Ann (Fonseca) Kanaka`ole; parents, Lamond and Bridget Kanaka`ole; brothers, Ernest (Alette), Kanio, Kaden "Ikaika" and hanai brother, Zane Kahele; sisters, Raenelle "Nohea" and Skye; grandmother, Ollie Kuehu; many uncles, aunts, cousins, nieces, nephews and countless friends. considered an ambassador of aloha in Hawaii's film and TV industry, died June 23, 2005 in Kaiser Medical Center from complications of cancer. Kanakaole was a valued utility worker on film, television, commercial and concert productions whom "we could always go to for help, and he jumped into whatever it was with a smile on his face," said Angie Laprete, a local production executive. Kanakaole most often worked as a production and locations assistant. Kanakaole was born in Honolulu. After graduating from McKinley High School in 1987, he worked on the Ali'i Kai Catamaran and met his future wife, Dana Fonseca, a hula dancer aboard the ship. The couple married May 1, 1993. At the suggestion of father-in-law Daniel Fonseca Sr., Kanakaole joined the Carpenters Union and became a drywall hanger. When the industry slowed, local production executive Irish Barber got Kanakaole into the film industry. Kanakaole's engaging personality was in full display at his first entertainment job in January 1998 when worked on the 100 Year Celebration Pepsi Convention on the Big Island featuring the Rolling Stones, Ray Charles and others. Among the 4,000 attendees were former President George H.W. Bush and wife Barbara. After his speech, the former president and his wife stood backstage encircled by secret servicemen. Kanakaole wanted to have his photo taken with them, so he yelled, "Hey, Mr. President. I was wondering if I could get a picture with you." Bush smiled, agreed and had his wife join them. Kanakaole was diagnosed in 1999 with an inoperable malignant neuro-endocrine tumor. "He loved to work so much that he would show up even when he was in intense pain," Barber said. Kanakaole productions included "Hawaii," "Baywatch Hawaii," "The Big Bounce," "50 First Dates," "Along came Polly," "The Shaggy Dog," "Blue Crush," "Britney Spears in Hawaii," "North Shore" and numerous commercials. "Lamond didn't have a single enemy in this business," Laprete said. "He was well known for his broad grin, ready laugh. Lamond was one of life's most beautiful people." He is survived by wife Dana; parents Lamond and Bridget; siblings Ernest, Nohea, Kanio, Skye, Kaden; and hanai brother Zane Kanahale. Services and final viewing will be held at Borthwick Mortuary Maunakea Chapel, 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. today, with a procession past Queen's Surf in Waikiki -- Kanakaole was an avid surfer -- prior to cremation. Casual attire. Scattering of ashes will be held at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday at Waikiki Beach. [SB July 2, 2005]

Cyril Kanemitsu, a retired judge willing to make unconventional decisions and a political campaigner who warned against politics in his law firm, died Thursday Mar. 10, 2005 at his home in Hilo. He was 80. While an attorney in private practice in the 1970s, Kanemitsu campaigned for former Democratic Lt. Gov. Tom Gill in his unsuccessful bids for governor. Yet as a lawyer, he warned his colleagues, "We do not allow politics to govern our cases," said his former partner, Valta Cook. He was both practical and idealistic, Cook said. Appointed as a district judge in Kona in 1980, he also handled cases that now would go to Family Court. The norm in those days was to grant custody of children to their mother in case of a divorce, but Kanemitsu also gave custody to the father when the welfare of a child required it, said his wife, Marge. People have come to her and told how fair her husband had been, she said. Then they reveal that they feel that way even though Kanemitsu ruled against them. Kanemitsu served as a district judge in Kona between 1980 and 1986 and then in Hilo from 1986 to 1992. The Judiciary was fortunate to have him serving on the lower court, said former Circuit Judge Paul de Silva. Although Circuit Court is considered to be at a higher level, he wasn't interested in that, de Silva said. Kanemitsu helped many young lawyers, including de Silva when he returned home to Hilo after law school. Andy Levin, who went on to become a state senator and is now an aide to Mayor Harry Kim, said, "He bent over backwards to make it possible for me to succeed." Kanemitsu served in the Army as a Japanese language specialist during World War II, then became an agricultural extension agent after the war. He turned to studying law, then represented small, independent sugar cane growers, at times lobbying for them in Washington, his wife said. Besides his wife, Marge, Kanemitsu is survived by sons Ben, Robert, David, and Ross Kanemitsu and Britt Murakami; daughter Anne Fujioka; brother Daniel; caregiver Estela Ellazar; and eight grandchildren. Services are at 4 p.m. Saturday at Dodo Mortuary. Friends may call from 2:30 p.m. Graveside urn committal will be at 9 a.m. Monday at Hawaii Veterans Cemetery No. 2. [SB Mar. 16, 2005]

Lily Kanalu Kau In Loving Memory Lily Kanalu "Porkchop" Kau, passed away peacefully on January 3, 2005, at the age of 81, in Alameda, California. She was the daughter of the late Kong Kau of Kohala, Hawaii, and Lily Makalena of Waialae, Oahu, and devoted sister to the late Arthur, Alice Leiwalo, Sony, Dick, Pauahi, Kulina, Hazel Paresa, Girlie Lincoln, Wendell and Eleanor Leveloff Faulkner. A loving auntie to everyone, she is survived by her brother Rudy Kau, sisters Bernice Park and Rose Torres, islands ohana, many nieces and nephews and their families and a multitude of friends. She was known by her relatives as Auntie Nalu and to her many old time friends as Porkchop. After attending McKinley High School, Auntie Nalu served 29 years with the Naval Supply Center at Pearl Harbor. She lived nearly all her life in Kaneohe near the majestic Koolau Mountains she adored. Auntie Nalu enjoyed a skosh of Seagrams 7 with plenty of kanikapila with her ukulele and guitar friends all the while singing "and my shoes keep walking back to me." The Kau/Smith campsite at Pokai Bay was open for business all day and all night each summer providing lots of fond memories for everyone. She spent the last two years in Alameda, California, sharing her aloha for the islands with friends, fellow members of the senior center and loyal volunteers of the Alameda Meals on Wheels program. She pursued her passion for travel by driving all the way to Las Vegas from San Francisco just after her 79th birthday. There was never too much holoholo for her. Auntie Nalu will forevermore be remembered by her jolliness, her sweet smile, her independent nature, her kindness, her effervescent style and her everlasting love for music which she sang so enthusiastically, especially when playing her signature songs such as "why_why_why_why_cause I love you thats why-oooh_oooh_sweet thing_love you baby oooh_oooh." She retained her zest for life and her feisty spirit to the end. Auntie Nalu will be deeply missed by all who loved and cared for her. At her request, no services will be held and her ashes scattered at sea, for which a time and place will be determined. [Adv Jan. 31, 2005]

Harry Waiolama Kealoha Sr., a Hawai'i volleyball pioneer whose athletic accomplishments spanned more than 45 years as a player, coach and official, died May 29, 2005 at Wahiawa General Hospital. He was 88. Kealoha gained fame as a volleyball coach, and tutored All-Americans Pete Velasco, who was the U.S. Olympic volleyball captain in 1968, and Tom Haine, and women All-Americans Fanny Hopeau, Pearl Mahiko, Gail O'Rourke, Sharon Peterson, Carol Friebe and Beth Hollinger (now Beth McLachlin). "He was one of many who had an influence on my life," said Velasco, who played under Kealoha at the YMCA in the late 1950s and early '60s, and added that Kealoha deserves to be inducted into the Hawai'i Sports Hall of Fame. "He was a good leader within the sport. He was always promoting the sport and exposing it to a lot of the local people." Kealoha started playing in the Palama Community Volleyball League in 1934 and became a gifted 5-foot-4 setter. He played on two Amateur Athletic Union Championship teams in 1953 and 1954. Following his playing days, Kealoha turned his attention to coaching at local, regional and national levels, including school, club and military teams. Kealoha coached the Central YMCA, Outrigger Canoe Club, University of Hawai'i men, and All-Navy teams, along with the Hawai'i National Women's Volleyball team, among others. His All-Navy men's teams won Interservice Championships in 1965 and 1972, and All-Navy titles in 1970, 1971 and 1977. Kealoha was an accomplished women's coach, winning runner-up honors at the 1969 United States Volleyball

Association national tournament in Knoxville, Tenn., with a team that included Hopeau, McLachlin and Peterson. "His life was volleyball," said Charlee Kowalski, a family friend who played under Kealoha at the YMCA. "He touched a lot of people, including people like me who were new to volleyball. He took the time to show us the love of the game." In 1967, Kealoha was awarded the USVBA's Leader in Volleyball Award for more than 20 years of distinguished volleyball leadership. In 1980, he received the prestigious USVBA Referee Emeritus Award in recognition of his significant contributions to the Official Association of the USVBA. "He had a passion for volleyball, and a passion for people," said Kealoha's son, Dwight. Kealoha was born Nov. 15, 1916, in Honolulu and graduated from McKinley High School in 1934. He was a former Pearl Harbor Shipyard Supply Supervisor and worked with the Naval Special Services. Kealoha is survived by his wife of 69 years, Fanny; sister, Violet Kawalski; daughter, Elsie K. Enos; sons, Harry Jr. and Dwight; three grandchildren; six great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild. Services will be at 8:30 p.m. June 25 at Mililani Memorial Park. [Adv June 10, 2005]

Harry Kealoha "was pretty much an all-around guy when it came to sports," according to his son Dwight. "He had a lot of interests. But his passion was volleyball." That passion was passed on to players at all levels, from those who considered themselves gym rats to those who became Olympians. The long roster of those he influenced included Pete Velasco, the captain of the first U.S. Olympic men's volleyball team in 1968. "He was a good man," said Velasco, who played for Kealoha on YMCA teams in the 1950s and '60s. "He was very helpful in promoting the sport in the state, very instrumental in getting a lot of us guys exposure at the national level. He was very committed to the development of the sport and always trying to pass on the skills to his players." Harry Waiolama Kealoha Sr. died May 29, 2005 at Wahiawa General Hospital at the age of 88. He was born Nov. 15, 1916, in Honolulu and was a 1934 graduate of McKinley High School. Kealoha began his decades-long involvement with volleyball in 1934 as a player in the Palama Community League. He later played on two AAU championship teams (1953-54) and went on to coach Central YMCA, Outrigger Canoe Club, the University of Hawaii men, and the Hawaii national women's, All-Navy men's and Armed Forces women's teams. His Navy men's teams won All-Navy titles in 1970, 1971 and 1977 and won the inter-service championship twice. He was a Pearl Harbor Shipyard Supply Supervisor and worked with the Naval Special Services. "It was fitting that his coaching career included success with the military teams," Velasco said. Called a "volleyball virtuoso" by the Star-Bulletin's late associate sports editor Bill Gee, Kealoha also coached Olympians Beth Hollinger McLachlin, the late Tom Haine, retired Hawaii-Hilo coach Sharon Peterson, Fanny Hopeau and Gail O'Rourke Wong. Kealoha also was a volleyball referee who earned his national rating in 1960, and served as the state officials chairman for seven years. The U.S. Volleyball Association recognized him with its Leader Award in 1967 and, in 1980, the rare Referee Emeritus Award given those who made significant contributions to the USVBA. Kealoha is survived by his wife of 69 years, Fanny; sister, Violet Kawalski; daughter, Elsie K. Enos; sons, Harry Jr. and Dwight; three grandchildren; six great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild. The funeral services will be held at 8:30 a.m. tomorrow at Mililani Memorial Park. Charley Keau, whose eighth-grade education didn't stop him from becoming a respected Maui archaeologist, died May 4, 2005 at the age of 78. Keau was born May 2, 1927, in Wailuku. He served in the Army and then went to work for the Maui County Parks and Recreation Department. In 1971, he met prominent Bishop Museum archaeologist Kenneth Emory, who persuaded him to study archaeology. Bolstered by the historical knowledge already imparted to him by his elders, Keau excelled at his work. His first project with Emory was helping to restore the Haleki'i-Pi'ihana heiau in Wailuku. Keau would go on to publish his work and act as a consultant to numerous agencies and community groups, including the Office of Hawaiian Affairs, the Protect Kaho'olawe 'Ohana and the Maui Historical Society. Kekai Robinson said her grandfather dedicated his life to perpetuating the Hawaiian culture. "He was a humble man, but he knew when to take a stand for what he knew was right," she said. "He always thought about the grandkids and for our grandkids. He wanted to make sure we knew about what our ancestors had done." Daughter Bernie Graham said her father was a strict but loving man who made sure his children, two boys and four girls, received an education. "He did what was right for us," she said. Visitation will begin at 9:30 a.m. May 21 at St. Anthony Church in Wailuku, with a Mass at 11 a.m. A lunch will follow in the social hall. The family requests no flowers; memorial donations will be used for the restoration of St. Joseph Church in Kaupo, one of Keau's favorite causes. His ashes will be spread over Nu'u Mauka Ranch, a 2,700-acre property recently acquired by Graham and her husband, Andy Graham. She said Keau was quite familiar with the archaeological history of the property. He also is survived by sons, Calvin and Joseph "Maka"; daughters, Marilyn Olsen and Eugenia Ewing; stepdaughter, Joyce Cabasug; son-in-law, Jose Balmores; brothers, Arnold and Peter "Butch"; sister, Leinani Tavares; 18 grandchildren, 14 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren. Yeiki Kobashigawa - Merle Kobashigawa knew little of his father's heroism during World War II until his daughter, visiting the Smithsonian Institute in Washington D.C., called home with the revelation in 1980. "She said, 'I saw Grandpa's name here for some kind of Distinguished Service Cross,'" Kobashigawa said. A quiet, reserved man, Yeiki "Lefty" Kobashigawa never spoke about his wartime deeds with his family. In 2000, Kobashigawa's Distinguished Service Cross was reviewed and upgraded to the Congressional Medal of Honor. Kobashigawa, a member of the famed 100th Battalion, died March 31 at age 87 in Ka Punawai Ola. Kobashigawa traveled to Washington, D.C., to get his medal from President Bill Clinton. To him, the Medal of Honor was "no big deal 54 years later, but for us it's a big deal, said his son, Merle, who spent 15 years in the military, and now serves as an Army advisor in Korea. His father told the then Secretary of the Army, "It's so long ago, just send it in the mail," Merle Kobashigawa said. Tech Sgt. Kobashigawa was recognized for leading his platoon in destroying four German machine gun nests near Lanuvio, Italy, on June 2, 1944. He was nicknamed "Lefty" because he was a pitcher for the Waianae Plantation Co. and Downtown and rural Japanese-American leagues. Born in Hilo, Kobashigawa worked for the plantation, and was inducted into the Army Nov. 16, 1941 at age 18. On Dec. 7, 1941, Kobashigawa was then assigned to the Hawaii Army National Guard's 298th Regiment. That morning he was preparing for a baseball game when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. "I caught an Army truck which took us through Kolekole Pass back to Schofield ... but shortly after that, they took away our rifles," he told the Star-Bulletin in 2000. "I don't know what they thought we would do." Kobashigawa was a retired maintenance mechanic with Hawaiian Cement Co. His sister Ruby remembers her brother as a hard worker, physically very strong and quite reserved. Throughout his youth, Kobashigawa would work days for the plantation, then help out on the family truck farm. He is survived by wife Haruko, sons Merle and Floyd, daughter Jill Yamashiro, brothers Seichi and Richard, and sister Ruby. Kobashigawa will receive full military honors when he is inurned at the National Cemetery of the Pacific 11:30 a.m. at May 18. Private services were held April 14. [SB Apr. 24, 2005]

Yeiki Kobashigawa, a Medal of Honor recipient from Wai'anae who fought with the famed 100th Battalion in World War II, seldom spoke about his wartime service. His son, Merle, found out about his father's heroism when his daughter went on a field trip to Washington, D.C., and stumbled on her grandfather's name in a display of Distinguished Service Cross recipients. "That was a different generation," the younger Kobashigawa said. "They were quiet, unassuming people." On Wednesday the elder Kobashigawa's ashes will be interred at the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific following a 49th-day memorial service at 11:30 a.m. He died March 31 at age 87. Kobashigawa was born in Hilo on Sept. 28, 1917, and later moved to Wai'anae. Before World War II, he worked at the Wai'anae Sugar Plantation and played baseball for the plantation company and for Japanese-American leagues. Although he batted right-handed, his left-handed pitching and catching gained him the nickname "Lefty," his son said. Kobashigawa joined the Army in November 1941, and after the Dec. 7 attack on Pearl Harbor, saw service in Africa, Italy and France. He was promoted rapidly and regularly, and gained a chest full of medals and at least one bullet wound during the war. In June 1944, near Lanuvio, Italy, Kobashigawa's platoon was held back by a series of enemy machine gunners, according to the citation that accompanied his Medal of Honor. He crawled toward the first machine-gun nest, tossed a grenade at the gunner and, while another soldier provided covering fire, charged the enemy position. After taking out that nest, he and the other soldier moved in to take on the next, this time with Kobashigawa providing the covering fire and the other soldier making the charge. Kobashigawa then discovered four more machine-gun nests and led a squad to neutralize two of them. He returned to Wai'anae after the war and raised his family there, teaching his son to bat left-handed. He worked as a maintenance mechanic for Gaspro Hawaii and then for the Hawaiian Cement Co. Merle Kobashigawa said that when Secretary of the Army Louis Calderato called his father in 2000 to tell him that President Clinton wanted to present him with the Medal of Honor, the elder Kobashigawa told Calderato to just put the medal in the mail. "He said, 'That was more than 50 years ago,' " Merle Kobashigawa said. His father had to be talked into going to Washington for the ceremony, he said. The ceremony bestowed the Medal of Honor on 22 Americans of Asian or Pacific Island ancestry who fought in World War II. Kobashigawa is survived by his wife, Haruko; sons, Merle and Floyd; daughter, Jill Yamashiro; two grandchildren; brothers, Seichi and Richard; and a sister, Ruby. [Adv May 13, 2005]

Daniel Hen Chong Kong, the first local-born resident to be pastor of a Southern Baptist congregation in Hawai'i, died Monday, Mar. 14, 2005 at Straub Clinic and Hospital. He was 76. An eloquent preacher with exceptional people skills, Kong established an outreach fellowship ministry in 1965 known today as the Ilikai Protestant Church that offers non-denominational Sunday services to thousands of visitors annually. He also served as pastor of First Baptist Church of Wahiawa, Olivet Baptist Church, Central Baptist Church; executive director of the Hawaii Baptist Convention, and president of Hawaii Baptist Academy. "He had a natural gift for leadership and preaching," the Rev. Mori Hiratani, retired pastor of Pearl City First Baptist Church, said of Kong, a childhood friend. Hiratani and Kong graduated from Leilehua High School in 1946, a class that produced six Southern Baptist ministers. Hiratani's family were Buddhists, while Kong's mother was a Congregationalist and his father an Episcopalian. The Southern Baptist conversion for many Wahiawa youths at the time was influenced by the Rev. James Belote, who served at what is now called First Baptist Church of Wahiawa. "Everything else was closed down from 1943-45," Hiratani said of the area churches. "Many of us had brothers and friends dying in the war, so it was a time when we had great questions in our minds about what life was all about. (James Belote) challenged us to commit our lives to the Lord's work." Kong started college at Michigan State, where his roommate was George Ariyoshi, later Gov. Ariyoshi, but earned his degree from Georgetown (Ky.) College. He received his master's of divinity degree from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville. "He had the unique ability to communicate the gospel because he walked the talk and lived the life," said Sharon Hagio, a longtime Hawaii Baptist Academy development office staff member. "He was truly an ambassador of Christ."

Kong, who retired as HBA president in 1993 because of health reasons, played a major role in the building of the academy in Nu'uuanu, said Hagio. Kong was president of the Hawaii Baptist Convention when the governing body of the local Southern Baptist churches authorized the April 1972 purchase of the Robertson Estate on Pali Highway for $553,000. The HBA campus was moved from the corner of Heulu and Liholiho streets to the new site in 1975. "It was difficult to do a capital fund drive here because there just weren't many church members here," Hagio recalled. So Kong and then-HBA president Stan Sagert embarked on a Mainland fund-raising effort that secured enough money to complete the project. "During the early years, Dan Kong spoke all over the south for six months, and as a result, the funding needed came from the Mainland," Hagio said. Mainland support contributed 70 percent of all building costs of HBA's three campuses. The Ilikai Protestant Church ministry, a mission of Olivet Baptist Church, was started in 1965 by Kong and by former Honolulu police chief Dan Liu, a church deacon. "He had the gift to associate day-to-day things with things from the Bible so it would apply," said Carol Oliver, ministry coordinator of the Ilikai Protestant Church, which honored Kong on its 40th anniversary celebration on Feb. 19. Kong is survived by his wife, Mary Eleanor; daughters, Danette Poole, Verdine, Edna and Betty-Jo DeFries; sister, Eileen Kong Lovelace; and three grandchildren. A service will be held Sunday at Olivet Baptist Church, 1755 S. Beretania St., at 3:30 p.m. Additional parking will be available at Central Union Church. Aloha attire. In lieu of flowers, the family requests contributions in Kong's memory to the Central Baptist Church building fund, 1717 Nehoa St., Honolulu HI 96822; the Kong Scholarship at Hawaii Baptist Academy, 2429 Pali Highway, Honolulu HI 96817, or the Maui Economic Opportunities BEST Reintegration Program, 99 Mahalani St., Wailuku HI, 96793. Ed Krentzman - The man who students at Wai'alaie Elementary School affectionately called Mr. K, or Grandpa, died Saturday. He was 75. Ed Krentzman, co-founder of the FELLOWS — Fellowship Education Lifelong Learning Opportunities With Students — never had any children of his own. But after retirement from Pitney Bowes, he often said he adopted 400 children who attend Wai'alaie Elementary School where he volunteered. Every school day for the past seven years, Krentzman would go to the school, tutor students in math and play chess or a friendly game of hangman with kids at recess. In between he would visit other schools encouraging volunteers to form similar programs. It was his second career, said his sister Avis Dannenberg, of Bridgeport, Conn. "He was so dedicated to these kids," Dannenberg said yesterday. "It was his whole life. He had nothing else, except the 49ers." Krentzman had fallen ill a week ago and went into the hospital to have a heart valve replaced. During his stay, school parents checked in on him daily. After the surgery, he didn't recover as doctors had expected, Dannenberg said. "He always said he'd live to be a hundred years old," she said. "I told him go for it. ... He never expected that he wouldn't be OK after the surgery." Krentzman was born and raised in Bridgeport. He left for a four-year stint in the U.S. Marine Corps in 1947. After his military service, Krentzman held sales positions at Acme Visible in San Francisco and Pitney Bowes. When he retired in Hawai'i he wanted something worthwhile to do and began volunteering at schools but soon realized that he needed more. Armed with an idea, he took the concept of the FELLOWS program and ran with it. With the support of a principal who gave the group a classroom to serve as headquarters, the rest was history. Today the program is in 30 schools around the island and has 140 volunteers. Senior citizens at Wai'ala'e have a converted classroom decorated in aloha print curtains, with a table and games, a mini-refrigerator and a bag of cookies for snacks at recess. In 2003, Krentzman was named the nation's Outstanding Older Adult Volunteer by Generations United, an umbrella organization for programs that bring seniors and young people together. "The biggest task ahead for us is to figure out how to keep the program going," said Mae Mendelson, Hawai'i Intergenerational Network executive director, who helped found the FELLOWS program. "It is Ed's legacy. I am so shocked." "We heard almost immediately," Wai'ala'e School principal Wendy Lagareta said. "He taught so many children how to play chess, and he would rejoice with them when a student beat him. He was really a wonderful person, a grandpa for our school. We'll really miss him." Services will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday at the State Veterans Cemetery in Kane'ohe. Memorial contributions may be sent to FELLOWS c/o the Hawai'i Intergenerational Network. Arrangements are being handled by Williams Funeral Services. He is survived by his sister Avis Dannenberg, brother-in-law Saul Dannenberg, nephew Howard Dannenberg and niece Karen Holson. Lagareta said the school also will hold a memorial service for Krentzman at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday for the students and parents. [Adv Feb. 9, 2005]

Robert Henry "Bobby" Krewson, one of the original Waikiki beachboys, died Saturday. He was 72. "Bobby was the handsomest guy on the beach. He was a great surfer, and he had a line of girls following him all the time," entertainer Don Ho said of his friend. Krewson won the Makaha International Surfing Championship as a tandem surfer and was one of the first surfers to ride the waves of Oahu's North Shore, said music promoter Tom Moffatt, who described Krewson as one of his best friends. Krewson was born on Maui but grew up in Waikiki, where he gave surfing lessons, Moffatt said. He later joined the Coast Guard with his childhood friend, singer and songwriter Kui Lee. He began his career as a beachboy in 1954, following his discharge. In 1964 developers Charles Pietsch and John Spierling picked him to run the beach concession at the new upscale Kahala Hilton Hotel. "You could have been a big CEO, but if you wanted a towel or a chair, you had to go to Bobby," Ho said. He also took guests on catamaran rides. Ho said Krewson was great with people and that everybody liked him. The hotel soon became a favorite gathering place for Hollywood celebrities. "A lot of people went to Kahala because of Bobby. The stars of Hollywood let their guard down because of Bobby," Moffatt said. Krewson retired in 1989 after 25 years of providing beach and pool service to hundreds of celebrities. He returned to Waikiki, where in recent years he could be found photographing tourists and people enjoying the ocean at "The Wall" during his morning walks. He is survived by companion Lauren Wong; sons Dwane and Cameron; daughters Ana, Kris and Saunie Krewson, Janna Dorsey and Kari Krewson-Evans; sisters Sylvia Reck and Charlotte Paresa; and six grandchildren. Family and friends were scheduled to spread his ashes in the waters off Waikiki Beach following 8 a.m. services today at Duke's statue. [SB Mar. 4, 2005]

Bobby Krewson, a longtime beachboy who rubbed elbows with many of the celebrities who stayed at the Kahala Hilton where he managed the beach concession for 25 years, died Sunday Feb. 27, 2005 at his daughter's home in Kailua. He was 72. Krewson was born in Pa'ia, Maui, and began his career as a beachboy in 1954 after his discharge from the Coast Guard. He took over the concession sometime later at the Kahala Hilton hotel — since renamed the Kahala Mandarin Oriental Hawaii — and provided beach and pool services for guests until he retired 17 years ago. Even after he retired, Krewson continued to share his love of the ocean with visitors to Hawai'i. In recent years, Krewson could often be found photographing tourists during his morning walks through Waikiki. He would later e-mail the photos to the visitors' families back on the Mainland and elsewhere. He also would stop at "The Wall" every morning to photograph other ocean lovers who shared his passion for all ocean sports. Krewson was 8 years old when Pearl Harbor was bombed, and he shared his recollections of the Day of Infamy in an Advertiser article published Dec. 8, 1991, some 50 years later. He said he was one of 35 children living at St. Mary's Episcopal

Orphanage when the bombing started. "It was just like the movies, the sound o' the bombs coming down, whistling and then boom!" Krewson told a reporter. In 1993, Krewson started a new business venture, marketing a product he called "Lomi Nomi." He combined oils and juice from the noni, kukui and aloe plants and referred to the concoction as a "therapeutic rejuvenating lotion." Services for Krewson will be held at 8 a.m. Friday at the Duke Kahanamoku statue on Kuhio Beach, followed by the burial of his ashes at sea. [Adv Mar.2, 2005]
