Eli R. Marozzi, 86, Honolulu sculptor and artist, died Aug. 31, 1999 in St. Francis Hospice. Marozzi, also president of the Vedanta Society of Hawaii, which embraces Hindu philosophy, had works of art commissioned by the Hawaii State Foundation on Culture and the Arts, the Tennent Art Foundation, St. Andrew's Cathedral and other entities. He founded the Vedanta organization here and served as president from its inception. Friends say he led an exemplary life devoted to the study and teaching of Vedanta beliefs, attracting a loyal following of Vedanta devotees from Hawaii and elsewhere. Friends also say he left a legacy of exceptional spiritual devotion and artistic achievement. His most prominent artworks include "The Cat (1970)," a concrete sculpture at Leeward Community College; "E Pluribus Unum (1982)," marble sculpture at Jefferson Elementary School; and "Kuikahi (1985)," terrazzo sculpture at Waianae High School. "E Pluribus Unum," in Marozzi's words, symbolizes that "we are many, but we can attain oneness in harmony." That sculpture at Jefferson Elementary is a 7-foot, 3,000-pound work with intertwined faces and arms. Marozzi was born in Motegallo, Italy. He grew up in Pennsylvania, performing U.S. military service from 1941 to 1943. His education included a bachelor's degree from the University of Washington in 1949 and a master's from the University of Hawaii in 1952. He taught sculpture, ceramics and art for many years at Richards Street and Kaneohe YWCAs. Memorial services will be at 11:15 a.m. Sunday at Richards Street YWCA Chapel.

Jiro Matsui, 79, of Pearl City, founder and owner of Petland and other outlets, died Saturday Mar 6, 1999 in Kaiser Hospital. The first Petland was on Union Street downtown, said son Alan K. Matsui, and the Ala Moana store, originally called Birdland, was one of the first tenants at Ala Moana. The family also ran the Union Street Petland with a wholesale business in the basement until the 1970s when the new Hawaiian Telephone Co. building was in the works, Matsui said. The Waimalu store recently closed, but Ala Moana and Kahala remain, he said. "He loved pets and he loved people," Alan said. "He seemed to find a way of getting people and pets together. No matter what time of the day or night, he was always willing to help people. "One big thing for him was -- because the industry gave him so much -- he wanted to give back; and what he did was start the largest consumer pet show in the world; and that's held every year at Pomona Fairgrounds (in California) now. . . . He was involved in the pet trade internationally as well as locally." Jiro Matsui served from 1940 to 1946 with the 100th Infantry Battalion which became part of the 442nd Regimental Combat Team in World War II. His decorations included a Bronze Star. "I know he was in Italy," said son Alan. "He never really talked about the war that much." He was a member of Club 100, the organization of 100th Infantry Battalion veterans. In 1993, the Chamber of Commerce of Hawaii named Matsui "Retailer of the Year," for his retailing skills and many community contributions. The Honolulu native was a goldfish breeder before the war. He became owner and vice president of Petland in 1946, earning a bachelor's degree from the University of Hawaii in 1949. He became president of Pets Pacifica, the wholesale outlet, in 1977 and president of Global Pet Industries in 1978. Also, he owned Honolulu Aquarium and Pet Supplies from 1946 to 1977. He became Western World Pet Supply Association vice president and director in 1974 and received that group's Edward B. Price Award in 1982. From 1979 to 1982, he was president of Retail Merchants of Hawaii. Also, he was a bird breeder and president of Waiawa Farmers from 1950 to 1983. Hobbies included fishing and gardening. Wayne Matsuo, chairman of the Judicial Selection Commission, died Sunday Oct 17, 1999 at home. Matsuo -- a University of Hawaii sociology lecturer, juvenile parole officer and administrator, and corrections expert -- was named to a six-year term on the commission in 1997 by Gov. Ben Cayetano. Matsuo, 56, had worked with youth gangs at Palama Settlement House and with at-risk youths and adult offenders since 1965. In 1995, Matsuo turned down a Cabinet position from Cayetano to spend more time with his family after serving since 1989 as the executive director of state Office of Youth Services. Matsuo at that time cited a heart condition as well as a grueling six days-a-week schedule as factors influencing his decision to retire. Matsuo had worked for 27 years in adult and juvenile corrections. He was acting state ombudsman before he was named as the first director of the Office of Youth Services in 1989. He had helped draft legislation creating the office. Hawaii's juvenile offender program has served as a model for others such as Nebraska and Missouri, which patterned their programs after the state's. Civil-rights attorney Dan Foley said Matsuo's passing is "a huge loss to the state." Foley noted that the American Civil Liberties Union had wanted him to take the job as director of the Department of Public Safety. "I think it was a loss to the state that he didn't become director of public safety," Foley said. "He was a real progressive force in the area of criminal justice," Foley added. He said Matsuo advocated alternatives to incarceration and wasn't swayed by public opinion polls. William Hoshijo, executive director of the state Civil Rights Commission, said Matsuo's death was "definitely a huge loss not just for the people who knew him, but to the broader community." "He was really a unique person who had a combination of substantive expertise, common sense and a real feel for what was right and wrong. We have lost a valuable resource." A youth gang member at McKinley High School, Matsuo later worked with street gangs in the 1960s. He received a master's degree in sociology from the University of Hawaii in 1976, and became the assistant director at the UH's Youth Development and Research Center. In 1983, he became acting ombudsman. He left that post when he was appointed as executive director of the Office of Youth Services. He has served on the board of directors of the National Association of Juvenile Correctional Administrators and was a member of the delegate assembly of the American Correctional Association. Survivors include his widow, Gail; two daughters, Stacy and Lianne; and two sisters, Diane Kahanu and Jean Matsuo. Funeral services will be held at 6 p.m. Oct. 26 at Nuuanu Mortuary. Barrett McCandless, longtime director of ASSETS, a school for children with special educational needs, died Sunday. She was 62. Originally founded as the Armed Services Special Education and Training School, ASSETS, under McCandless' leadership, came to be recognized as an outstanding educational program for dyslexic and especially gifted children, two groups which have unique difficulties in the general student population. McCandless joined the school as a diagnostician in 1971. In 1974, she became executive director, a post she held until 1995, when she left to form Educational Testing Services. Born in Roanoke Rapids, N.C., she arrived in Hawaii with her Navy husband, pilot John McCandless, in 1971. It was her daughter who first got McCandless, a teacher, interested in the special needs of dyslexic children. When she noticed her daughter was not progressing properly in school, she went back to school to get a degree in special education. By the time she had arrived in Hawaii and joined the school, she was skilled enough to diagnose her daughter as dyslexic. With that as her inspiration, McCandless eventually helped create a school that became nationally recognized for its expertise in dealing with the dyslexic and gifted. She is survived by daughters, Margaret McCandless Niver and Catherine Elizabeth McCandless; hanai sons, Ron, Tracey and Ming; and a sister, Saunders Proctor King. A private service was held under direction of Ultimate Cremation Services of Hawaii. The family prefers donations to the American Stroke Association, in care of the Hawaii chapter of the American Heart Association.

Bobbie Hughes McDermott, Hawaii author, travel writer and public relations and business leader, died at her Honolulu home late Tuesday Mar 23, 1999 after a lengthy illness. She was 71. She and husband John McDermott wrote 10 travel books and published hundreds of articles -- roaming the world more than 20 years for material. She founded Communications-Pacific, Hawaii's oldest and largest public relations firm, in 1969. Bill Cook, second owner of Communications-Pacific, said her contributions were substantial. "One of the things that has been said about her, and I endorse it: She came to Hawaii and liked it and told the world," he said. "When she first got here, there were no hotels on the Kona-Kohala Coast -- and now there are 4,000-plus hotel rooms. She brought a degree of professionalism to public relations," he added. Born in Lufkin, Texas, she grew up in Center, Texas, earning a bachelor's in journalism at Texas Women's University. One of her early jobs was with the Community Chest of Greater Dallas. She then became a paid-by-the-word correspondent for the then six Fairchild Publications, including "Women's Wear Daily," "Men's Wear" and "Housewares News." Later, she entered public relations with a Dallas firm that represented oil, beef, banking, insurance, fashions and furniture industries. Moving to Hawaii in 1958, she went to work for the Fawcett McDermott ad agency to do publicity for the Ala Moana Center opening. She later joined the Milici ad agency to start its public relations division. In 1969, she opened Communications-Pacific, her own firm, with its first and largest client Honolulu Gas Co. and owner Jim Gary. Known for her straightforward advice and creativity, she also blended in a touch of charm. The Mauna Kea Beach Hotel was another early client. The hotel was the scene of her surprise wedding to advertising executive John McDermott in 1973. Bobbye McDermott, a leader in the national Society of American Travel Writers, was inducted into the Public Relations Society of America Hall of Honor in 1998. Also in 1998, she became part of Communications-Pacific again, in planning the opening of the Nieman Marcus outlet at Ala Moana. She is survived by her husband; daughters Denise McDermott-Adler and Madeleine McDermott; sister Kim Dawson; brother Jay Hughes; and one grandchild. There will be a "Breakfast with Bobbye" memorial gathering at 8 a.m. Wednesday at the Outrigger Canoe Club. All friends are invited. A private memorial service is planned. The family suggests contributions be made to the American Cancer Society or St. Francis Hospice.

Adolph J. "Duffie" Mendonca, Hawaii developer, rancher, war veteran and football captain died May 26 in Lodi, Calif. He was 86. He cleared 1,600 acres of thicketed land on Molokai to build one of the state's model cattle ranches, the Kalae Ranch, where he raised white-faced Hereford in the 1950s. A longtime local businessman, Mendonca served as chairman of the Oahu County Committee of the Republican Party during the Eisenhower administration, and became a supporter and close friend of Honolulu Mayor Frank Fasi. "My father was very interested in politics. He was a staunch and loyal Republican," said his daughter, Yvonne Mendonca Johns. Born in Kalihi, he graduated from St. Louis and the University of Hawaii, where he starred as right tackle on the 1934 football team. That 1934 UH team beat the highly touted University of California team in the New Year's Day classic by holding them scoreless in a tight defensive battle. Mendonca captained the team in his senior year and after graduation played for the Town Team, then semiprofessional. He remained active for years afterward in UH alumni and athletic affairs. "He never forgot where he came from," Johns said. He joined the military during World War II as a member of the 298th Infantry Division, serving in the South Pacific, Philippines and Japan from 1940 to 1945. Mendonca achieved the rank of major and spent his last year of service as military governor of Gamma-ken during the American occupation. To prepare for the role, he went through military intelligence training and learned the Japanese language at the University of Virginia and Stanford University. Upon his return to Honolulu, Mendonca became a developer, building housing for the postwar housing need. He became a small business owner, rancher, and lastly a real estate appraiser, at which he worked until his late 70s. One lesson Johns will always remember from her father: "He taught me it's better to be generous than not." Mendonca left Hawaii in 1990 with his wife, Violet, to live closer to their children. The Mendoncas had been married for nearly 62 years. In addition to his wife and daughter, Mendonca is survived by children Duff and Elise, four grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren. The family had a private service in California. A memorial Mass will be offered in November, followed by his burial at the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific at Punchbowl.

FRANCIS S. MORGAN - Morgan's effort to keep the sugar industry alive on the Big Island failed when Hama-kua Sugar Co. was forced to begin bankruptcy proceedings in 1992. It didn't brand him as a failure, but rather as an optimist. "The guy had unflinching optimism. With him the cup was always full, he never felt he was dealt a bad hand," said David Heenan, Campbell Estate chairman. Henry A. Walker Jr., retired Amfac chairman and chief executive officer, said: "He was a sense, he believed that there is something good out there, 'I think we can do this if we pull together.' "I think of Frannie as the last man standing in sugar, by himself at least." Morgan died Sunday Jul 25, 1999 in Straub Hospital at the age of 80. He was president of Kualoa Ranch, where his great-great-grandfather, Dr. Gerrit Judd, started a cattle-raising operation in the mid-1800s. The Windward Oahu ranch has been expanded into an action tourism destination, concert and group picnic site and movie set. "He spent his entire life working," said son John Morgan, Kua-loa Ranch manager. "Beginning at 12 years old, he rode for his entire life at the ranch, until a couple years ago when he became physically unable. "His interests were Kualoa Ranch, work and family. "Morgan was 64, ready to retire as group vice president for agriculture after nearly 40 years with Theo H. Davies and Co., when the Hong Kong-owned company decided to sell Hamakua Sugar, the second largest plantation in the islands, at a time when the sugar market was shrinking. He brought family and associates together to pay $69 million for the operation, which included 35,000 acres and two sugar mills and provided jobs for more than 800 people. "I tried to talk him out of it," Walker said. "He made a stand ... he gave it everything he had." Takashi Domingo, former Hawaii County councilman and ex-ILWU union official, said: "He told us that his intent was (for the plantation) to become more efficient, it would do something for all the community. Unfortunately things got beyond his control, but he bought time for us. I'm grateful for that, I have a lot of respect for him, he was a man of sincerity." "He was a visionary, he was curious, and he was a bit of a dreamer," said Heenan, former Theo Davies chairman and chief executive. "He came very close, within six to 12 months, to making it. He ran out of time because of the economic downturn in Asia and (faded) prospects of selling some blocks of land that would have been the margin of safety to keep it afloat." Although Morgan was involved in the plantation aspects of Theo Davies, "he was not simply an agriculture guy," Heenan said. "He had a very far-reaching mind, he was never really given credit for that. "It was foremost in his mind to leave these islands better than he found them," Heenan said. Morgan attended Hanahauoli School and Punahou School and graduated from Stanford University. He served as a Navy lieutenant in the Pacific during World War II. He headed the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association for many years and served on the board of directors of St. Francis Medical Center, Hawaii Preparatory Academy and Hanahauoli School. He is survived by his wife, Margo; sons David and John; daughter Patricia Black; and six grandchildren. Services will be at 3 p.m. Thursday at Punahou School's Thurston Chapel.
