Marian Walsh, 76, founder and former director of Waikeola Pre-School at Waikeola Congregational Church in Kahala, died Sept. 2, 1999. She founded the preschool at 4705 Kilauea Ave. in 1961, starting with 60 children and a staff of five, following many years of teaching at Holy Nativity School. Visiting Japanese educators later introduced the Waikeola philosophy to Japan, opening a Waikeola English School in Osaka in 1983 and another in Kobe in 1984, with a Walsh picture in each school. In an interview, she summed up the Waikeola philosophy as a means to help children create a high-quality self-concept. "A child should be made to feel good about himself," she said. "Each child is an individual and should be allowed to grow at his own rate, never to be compared with brothers, sisters or peers. If a child feels good about himself and worthwhile, and experiences are provided that meet his growth needs, that child should feel secure, confident and peaceful within." Upon her 1988 retirement, she had seen more than 3,000 students pass through the school. The city observed a special Marian Walsh Day at her retirement, and the church named a building for her. Later, she was honored by both houses of the state Legislature. She did volunteer work with Friends of Aina Haina Library and served as president of the Niu Valley Association and Hawaii Association for the Education of Young Children. In later years she did volunteer work with Meals on Wheels, Bishop Museum, Hawaii Children's Museum, Hawaii Nature Center and also read to kindergarten classes at Aina Haina School. Additionally, she and her late husband, George, were active in square-dance activities. Born in Mitchell, Neb., in 1943, she married Joseph Geer Jr., who later died in World War II. The young widow eventually moved with their daughter to Hawaii. She married George Walsh in 1948. The family won a "Family of the Year" honor in 1955. George S.B. Walters, who used his huge crane to shield the Pacific Fleet flagship, the battleship Pennsylvania, from attacking enemy planes on Pearl Harbor Day, died Friday Feb 26, 1999 in Kaiser Hospital. He was 95. Some witnesses credited civilian Walters with saving the Pennsylvania and helping Navy gunners down eight to 10 attacking planes. As the attack went on, Walters continued to run his electrified crane back and forth along its track to keep it in the path of incoming bombers and use the boom as a pointer to warn gunners which direction planes were coming from. After a 500-pound bomb exploded nearby, damaging the crane and stunning Walters, he nearly fell from the crane. A Navy officer climbed up and tackled the staggering Walters, who knew nothing of what was going on until he awoke later in the base dispensary. Walters' crane may have contributed to the crash of an enemy plane, which appeared to damage its undercarriage on crane cables. He was told the plane crashed at Hospital Point below Aiea and that it hit a building on its way down. Walters had moved the crane just in time to avoid a direct hit from the bomb, which left a 17-foot crater. Walters later wondered how he survived. "Why God has protected me, I don't know," he said. "But he must have had a reason." Walters also was a clown and ringmaster with Shriners' clowns who entertained ill children and other groups for charity. He performed countless hours of volunteer work in various activities and was chosen as the outstanding male senior citizen for 1994 in the Mayor's Senior Recognition Program. His many interests included growing things. He learned to make compost, did planting and installed an irrigation system on a small plot. Born in Denver, Colo., his parents brought him to Hawaii when he was 14 months old. He first worked at Pearl Harbor in 1935, remaining a crane operator until 1950 and retiring from the shipyard as a supply technician in 1966. Most recently, he lived at Salt Lake. Alexander Cooke Waterhouse, one of the University of Hawaii's staunchest athletic boosters, died at his Waialae-Kahala home yesterday Mar 30, 1999. He was 87. "He died peacefully in his sleep," said Ed Wong, a long-time friend and chairman of the board, president and CEO of Waterhouse, Inc. "Alec was interested in University of Hawaii football 'til the very end," added Wong, who told him about the opening of spring football for the Rainbows on Monday. "He was so pleased that everything went well at practice. We're going to continue his legacy in helping the university athletic program." One of the founding fathers of Koa Anuenue, the UH sports booster organization, Waterhouse donated $303,000 to help buy the state-of-the-art equipment for the weight room at the Stan Sheriff Center. The facility, which opened in 1995, is named in his honor. When June Jones was named head football coach last December, Waterhouse made a commitment to a new grass practice field expected to cost around $500,000. "We have lost a very good friend," Jones said. "I don't think I ever met a guy who never had anything bad to say about anybody. He's a big loss to this program and to our community. He was a very humble man, a great friend and a great person." Waterhouse, who comes from an old kamaaina family, befriended all of the UH coaches, opening his Kula, Maui, retreat or his Kauai ranch for their summer vacations. He also owned four golf courses in California. "We really lost a good friend. It creates a big void in our athletic program," UH athletic director Hugh Yoshida said. "He was always there when we needed help. He was always loyal to the Rainbows, win or lose." Jim Burns, president of Koa Anuenue, called Waterhouse one of the great supporters of UH sports. "He was totally devoted. We need more like him," said Burns, whose father, the late Gov. John A. Burns, called on Waterhouse to become one of the charter members of Koa Anuenue back in the 1960s.
