Attorney Harriet Bouslog represented her before the House Un-American Activities Committee here in 1950. She issued a statement to the press that said in part: "In 1938 my fellow employees in the fountain department of the S.H. Kress Store protested the unreasonable demands of the head of that department by having a walkout. The CIO organizers got in touch with these employees and I, with many others, joined the union.

"I was elected on the board of trustees. A week later, several of us, each from a different department, were notified that we were fired. My work was never questioned before and it was clear to me that my joining the union was the cause of my dismissal. I am proud of the number of picket lines I have walked since 1938, and I will continue to fight."

Today's service is organized by the Hawaii People's Fund. Saiki was one of its board members for many years.

She lent support to Hansen's disease patients at Hale Mohalu, the Hawaiian sovereignty movement, gay rights and many labor causes. Velma Santos, former Mauicouncilwoman, dies at 69 . Even after leaving politics, former Maui County Councilwoman Velma Santos worked as a leader and community volunteer on the Valley Isle. Maui Mayor James Apana fondly remembers Santos in the rain, holding an umbrella as she checked in children for the annual Christmas parade in Wailuku. "She was always in the forefront, the first to volunteer. She always led by example," Apana said. Santos died of complications from a heart attack Monday night while at Queen's Medical Center on Oahu. She was 69. Santos once recalled how she had difficulty finding a job because she was a woman, even after graduating with a college degree in biology in 1952. The experience galvanized her commitment to break through social barriers and eventually enter politics. She worked as an elementary teacher for more than 20 years while raising four children, and was first elected as a Republican to the state House in 1974. After she was unseated in 1976, she accepted an offer from Democratic Maui Mayor Elmer Cravalho to serve as director of his county Department of Human Concerns. Cravalho said he appointed Santos because she was "tremendously able" and had "unquestioned honesty." "She had good organization skills. She was good -- very, very good," he said. "She was really a very straight-forward person. Whatever she had to say, you knew right away." Santos, noting her liberal views and disagreement with the Republican Party, became a Democrat and served on the Maui County Council from 1982 to 1990. She ran unsuccessfully in a three-way Democratic race for mayor in 1990. Santos served as chairwoman of the Democratic Party of Maui and later became the chairwoman of the Wailuku Main Street Association, a group involved in revitalizing Wailuku town. County Planning Director John Min said Santos played a key role in preserving not only Wailuku, but other small towns on Maui. "Velma was very committed to small-town planning and the preservation of our local heritage," Min said. "She was a major force in that." Santos also served as a resource for incoming Council members and conducted a class on parliamentary procedure. "Many members in the community and county government looked to her for guidance," said Councilwoman Charmaine Tavares. "It's a great loss for the community and county government." Susanne Hotta, owner of Gilbert's Formal Wear in Wailuku, said she loved the way Santos ran a meeting. "She was efficient, well organized and very intelligent," Hotta said. "You don't see a woman like that too much." Santos is survived by her husband, Louis, and four children. Services have been tentatively scheduled for Sunday.

Judge Kenneth Saruwatari dies at 78. Retired District Judge Kenneth Saruwatari, 78, a veteran of both the 100th Infantry Battalion and the 442nd Regimental Combat Team, died Sept. 9 in Honolulu. Saruwatari was born in Palama on March 27, 1922. As a child, he grew to love baseball, going to local games with his father. He joined the Army during World War II and was wounded in Europe, receiving Purple Heart and Bronze Star medals for heroism in combat. He reached the rank of sergeant. After the war, Saruwatari attended the University of Hawai'i, where he met his future wife, Vivian. They were married in Philadelphia in 1949. He earned his law degree from Rutgers University in New Jersey. Saruwatari worked as a lawyer and served as a judge until retiring in 1986.

He had been president of the 442nd Veterans Club and the Club 100 veterans group.

To celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary last year, the couple visited family in Japan.

"We have a very close family," his wife said. After Saruwatari retired, he and his wife supported UH sports by going to many football, basketball and baseball games, even following the baseball team on Mainland trips. Spencer Kalani Schutte, 65, an imposing figure in Big Island politics and in many other respects, died early yesterday Nov 27, 2000 at his ranch in Waimea after a long bout with lung cancer. As a member of the Hawai'i County Council for 14 years, Schutte was a force in county tax matters and was a strong advocate of affordable housing and providing shelter for the homeless. He was known for his blunt, direct manner, but also had a hearty laugh that he used to disarm opponents. A burly 6-foot-4, 340-pound man, the former Roosevelt High School football player made light of his stature in one of his political campaigns, using the slogan: "Think Big, Think Schutte." Mayor Steven Yamashiro counted Schutte among his close friends. Once Kalani gave you his commitment, you never had to worry," Yamashiro said yesterday.

U.S. Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawai'i, yesterday praised Schutte as a man who "never forgot his roots, ... He was a political leader of the people." Schutte was a rancher and businessman who began his working life as a Honolulu police officer before winning a 372-acre Hawaiian homestead pasture lease that he managed until his death. He also was a former charter fishing skipper and a restaurant, bar and dairy operator, and was the first person to portray King David Kalakaua at the Merrie Monarch Festival in 1964. After serving 10 years on the state Tax Review Board, Schutte was elected to the council in 1980. During his final re-election bid in 1992, he contributed $10,000 in campaign money to assist Kaua'i in the wake of Hurricane Iniki. Schutte also was considered a key player as vice chairman of the 1979 Charter Commission that adjusted county government.

In 1997, he became deputy finance director in charge of real property, retiring this fall.

Among Schutte's survivors are his wife, Louella, who raised farm animals on their ranch; and his son, Zanga, considered one of Hawai'i's top rodeo performers. He leaves four other sons, Joey, Guy, Lance and Lawrence; three daughters, Mrs. Robert (Wendy) Brophy and Mrs. Richard (Bonnie) Sanchez of Waimea, and Mrs. Toby (Tita) Taniguchi of Waikoloa; 18 grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren. Schutte also is survived by two brothers, Fred of Waimea and Clarence of Wai'anae; and a sister, Maha Kraan of North Kohala. A family visitation will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. Friday at Dodo Mortuary in Hilo, with a memorial service at 6 p.m. His ashes are to be scattered at a later date. The family requests casual attire.

He won awards as a radio producer and was creative director for radio KCCN/KINE. He and his wife shared drive-time disc jockey duties at KQMQ from 1994 to 1998. He joined KCCN/KINE in January 1999. "I would wish without trying to sound boastful that every man, woman and child could know a love such as we have known from him," said his wife, Erika Engle Scott. "I would like to thank everyone for their support -- monetary (and) spiritual," she said. "I've gotten so much help from so many people, many of whom I've never met and I'm very blessed by all of it -- and so I wish to say a heartfelt thanks," she said. In addition to his wife, he is survived by daughter Cassidy; sons Zachary, Dylan and Taylor; father Clifford R. Scott; mother Billie J. Scott; brother David Scott; and sisters Lisa Criss and Rebecca Scott. Memorial donations may be made to Friends of Cliff Richards, c/o Trinity Presbyterian Church, 875 Auloa Road, Kailua, Hawaii 96734.

Witt Hedemann P. Shingle, 49, a Honolulu-born Hawaiian music record producer who was noted for his promotion of Gabby Pahinui and other artists, died May 2, 2000. One of Shingle's career highlights occurred in 1971 when he, Steve Siegfried and Lawrence Brown produced a "Sons of Hawaii" release often known as the "red album" because of its colorful packaging. Dubbed the "folk music of Hawaii," it spotlighted Eddie Kamae, Gabby Pahinui, Moe Keale, Joe Marshall and David Rogers. It was reissued in 1998 on Panini Records, Shingle's label, as a compact disc, featuring songs "No Ke Ano Ahiahi," "Kanaka Waiwai," "I Love Christmas," "Kuu Pete," "Waikiki Hula" and "Aloha Chant." The original 1971 release coincided with the Hawaiian Renaissance, a golden era of Hawaiian music. Pahinui was at that time a legendary stylist who defined a genre of grass-roots ethnic Hawaiian melodies. Other Panini releases showcased Sunday Manoa and the Peter Moon Band. Peter Moon described Shingle as a very nice, quiet and gentle person. "He was very much of a gentleman," Moon said, adding he was saddened at Shingle's death. Moon credited Shingle with helping bring about the Hawaiian Renaissance of the early 1970s. "He was part of a team that recorded and cared for Gabby Pahinui," Moon said. Leinaala Simerson dies. Leinaala Simerson, a noted Hawaiian entertainer and mother of singer Nohelani Cypriano, died Saturday, Jan 11, 2000 in Honolulu. She was 71. Simerson was born Beatrice Leinaala Ignacio in June 1928 in Kalihi. She began her career as a jazz and blues singer in Waikiki. Simerson performed for many visiting dignitaries, including astronauts, royalty and Hollywood stars, and she toured the world as a representative of the Hawaii Visitors Bureau. She counted actor Burt Reynolds and singer Jim Nabors among her friends. "She had this aura about her," Cypriano said. "I always knew she did have it, but after her passing, the people who have been calling and the people who have been really touched by her — it's touching me now because I never knew how much of an impact she had on people." Cypriano credited her mother with introducing her to the world of music. "When I was 4, she made me May Day queen. She was up there playing piano with the little May Day queen. That was my first time on stage. I sang two songs," Cypriano said. "My only regret is she didn't record her own record." Hawaiian music legend Auntie Genoa Keawe began singing with Simerson more than 40 years ago at the Waikiki Tavern. "She's a wonderful person and a terrific wahine to work for," Keawe said. Simerson is survived by her husband, Kalani; another daughter, Michelle Reicherter; sisters, Rachel Igarta, Amy Keawe and Eleanor Duenas; and two grandchildren. Mitsugu Sumada dead at 73. Retired Hawai'i Community College provost Mitsugu "Mits" Sumada died late Monday Dec 4, 2000 at Hilo Medical Center after a long illness. He was 73.

Sumada began his career in Hana, Maui, in 1951, and also worked on Kaua'i and as a principal on O'ahu before coming to Hilo as principal of the Hawai'i Technical School, which became Hawai'i Community College in 1969. He served as head of the college from 1964 until his retirement in 1986. Herbert Watanabe, who is beginning a second term on the state Board of Education and was a longtime Lions Club member with Sumada and his close friend for 50 years, called him "a great listener and a fine communicator." Watanabe said Sumada saw the Big Island's vocational education needs and filled them as the community college's enrollment grew fivefold and programs in hospitality, culinary arts, nursing and computers were established. "He was a huge contributor to this island," Watanabe said. "He gave his time freely, but he was never one to take the credit." After retiring, Sumada spent five years as executive director of the Hawai'i Island Chamber of Commerce and continued to volunteer for a half-dozen organizations, including the United Way and Boy Scouts. An annual fund-raising roast has been held in his name since 1987 to support a perpetual scholarship established in his honor at the community college. Watanabe also recalled Sumada's skills as a parade-float creator who won 11 first-place trophies in Hilo's International Parade. Sumada was born March 1, 1927, in Tacoma, Wash. He received his undergraduate and graduate degrees from the University of Minnesota. Friends may call 2 to 4 p.m. Monday at Dodo Mortuary. A Waiakea Lions Club necrology will be held at 4 p.m. and a memorial service at 4:15 p.m. The family requests aloha attire and no flowers.
