Yoshimi Takeda of Kalamazoo, Mich., an internationally renowned music director who worked for Hawai‘i Opera Theatre and conducted "Madame Butterfly" in Honolulu in 1985, died July 24. He was 67. Takeda led the Kalamazoo Symphony Orchestra as music director for 25 years; in 1999 he became music director laureate. He worked as a conductor in Hawai‘i in the 1960s. Hawai‘i Opera Theatre associate artistic director Beebe Freitas said she was continually amazed by Takeda’s talent and poise.

"I admired him greatly. He was extremely personable. He was very caring about the musicians and the music that was played," said Freitas. "He was a gentleman and a wonderful musician." Takeda was born Feb. 3, 1933, in Yokohama, Japan. He graduated from the Tokyo University of Arts, made his debut with the Tokyo Symphony in 1958 and began his American career in 1962 in Cleveland. In 1970, after serving as associate conductor of the Honolulu Symphony for six years, Takeda began work as music director and resident conductor of the New Mexico Symphony Orchestra, a post he held concurrently with a position in Kalamazoo from 1974 to 1984. Takeda twice received the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers Award for Adventuresome Programming of Contemporary Music. Takeda was also awarded two honorary doctorate degrees. His guest conducting appearances included engagements with the Cleveland Orchestra; the Chicago, Detroit, Phoenix, San Diego, Pittsburgh, Louisville, Honolulu and Cape Town symphonies; the London Philharmonic; the National Orchestra of Belgium; and other major orchestras in Spain, Mexico, Portugal, Japan and South Africa.

He is survived by his wife, Mary Ellen; son, Christopher; brother, Tsuneo; and sister, Toshiko. A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. on Monday at Stetson Chapel on the campus of Kalamazoo College, Kalamazoo, Mich. Memorial contributions can be made to the Kalamazoo Symphony Orchestra, the West Michigan Cancer Center or the University of Michigan Cancer Clinic.

L. Newell Tarrant, patriarch of an acting family who brought air-conditioning to Ruger Theatre and introduced the concept of "guest actors" at the Honolulu Community Theatre, died of cancer Thursday, Jan 27, 2000 in Raleigh, N.C. He was 88. "He was very committed to theater," said John Rampage, artistic director at Diamond Head Theatre, which previously was known as HCT. "I will always remember his commitment to raising the standards of the theater, to make sure it would continue. He had such passion for the stage, to take it the next level." And vision, said Joyce Maltby, director at Hawaii Pacific University Theatre. "He directed me in a show called 'Happy Birthday,' and he brought in his friend Peggy Ryan to choreograph a dance for me. He wanted me to set up some acting classes for children. Now, of course, there are a lot of children taking classes there." Jim Hutchison, who succeeded Tarrant at HCT, said: "What always impressed me about him was his energy and enthusiasm for theater. Few know that he won a Lifetime Achievement honor from the American Association of Community Theatres." Tarrant was managing director at HCT for 15 years, beginning in 1962. Ruger Theatre then had leaking roofs and poor acoustics. "Dogs used to bark in the middle of our plays, and we'd hear them," Tarrant had said in a 1969 Advertiser interview. He resolved the major problem — heat and humidity — with the installation of air-conditioning. Tarrant's staging of musicals drew lavish praise. Even composer Meredith Willson flew over for the launching of his "Music Man." A production of "My Fair Lady" was so popular, the military requested HCT to take the show to Midway. A Tarrant production in 1964 of William Goldman's "Blood, Sweat and Stanley Poole" also played the before a captive audience at the state prison. "No small feat," Tarrant remarked afterward, "because 'Stanley Poole' is a show set on an Army base, and weapons-handling is a crucial element of the plot. We had a helluva time getting all those Garand rifles and bayonets into prison." Under his leadership, HCT advocated the premiere of locally written plays, including Aldyth Morris' "The Damien Letter" and John Kneubuhl's "Hello, Hello, Hello." To enrich productions and inspire community actors and technicians, Tarrant negotiated guest artist contracts with Actors Equity for Mainland professionals to work on both sides of the footlights, a tradition that continues today. Before arriving in the Islands with his wife, Jean Tarrant, and son Newell Jr., Tarrant was managing director of The Playhouse in Erie, Pa., for 16 years. He also had acting and directing credits spanning six decades in five other states: Texas, Indiana, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Ohio. Until his retirement, he was managing and artistic director of the Raleigh Little Theatre. He was proudest of his role in the early careers of such actors as Henderson Forsythe, Ann B. Davis, Bette Midler, Jerry Stiller, Rue McLanahan, Barbara Babcock, Frank Langella, Richard Herd, Ned Beatty and the late Vic Morrow. Tarrant's other survivors include sons Terry and Chester. Frederick James Kealiimahiai Titcomb, a retired District Court judge and former Honolulu deputy prosecuting attorney, died Friday, March 10, 2000 in Honolulu. He was 77. Born in Honolulu, Titcomb was a descendant of early U.S. settlers. He also was of Hawaiian and Chinese ancestry and his great-great-grandfather, sugar plantation owner Charles Titcomb, married into Hawaiian royalty. Frederick Titcomb graduated from St. Louis High School and was a student at Washington State College when the United States entered World War II in 1941. He dropped out of college to enlist in the Army and served in New Guinea and the Philippines. Titcomb earned a Purple Heart and two Bronze Star medals for his combat service. After the war, he returned to Washington State College and then attended Cornell University. He married, and he and his first wife, Norma, returned to Hawaii. The couple would later divorce. The family moved to San Francisco in 1953 so Titcomb could pursue a legal education at the University of California's Hastings College of Law. To put himself through school and to support his family, Titcomb worked as a warehouseman, trucker, door-to-door salesman and night janitor at Hastings. After graduating, he returned to Hawaii and worked as a law clerk for Judge Jon Wiig. In 1956, he went to work as a city prosecutor, where he won more than 40 consecutive jury convictions. In 1960, Titcomb ran as a Republican against Dan Inouye for a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives. Inouye won by a nearly 3-to-1 vote and two years later was elected to the Senate. In 1962, Titcomb was named a Honolulu District Court judge. In addition to practicing law, Titcomb was a member of the Screen Actor's Guild and was frequently seen on "Hawaii Five-0." In 1983, Titcomb married Marcia Vander Zicht, who was his nurse after open-heart surgery. In addition to his wife, and his

Doris Todd, 87, popular singer. Former Isle resident Doris "Dotty" Todd, who popularized the song "Chanson D'Amour" with her husband, Art, died Dec. 12 in California. She was 87. Todd was born in Elizabeth, N.D., and attended business college. But from a young age, Todd loved to play the piano. She studied music in New Jersey and, at 13, gave a piano recital at Carnegie Hall in New York City. If Art and Doris "Dotty" Todd hadn't been accidentally booked into the same hotel room, the world may have never known their "Chanson D'Amour." The couple married in Baltimore after the hotel mix-up in 1941. Two years later, they moved to Los Angeles, where they worked as a singing duet at the Chapman Hotel. After he served two years in the Army, the couple moved to Los Angeles and began performing at the Chapman Park Hotel, as well as on a CBS radio show. The Todds' big break came in 1958 when their record, "Chanson D'Amour," topped the charts across the country. During a three-week period, they made two appearances on the Ed Sullivan Show. After long runs at two Las Vegas hotels, the Todds retired in Hawai'i in 1980. They ran a supper club and were active members of the O'ahu Country Club and Outrigger Canoe Club. After doing some guest spots on CBS radio with Mary Aster, the duo spent five years on their own show. After several years of singing at the Dunes and MGM Grand Hotels in Las Vegas, the Todds retired to Honolulu in 1980, where they joined the Oahu Country Club and the Outrigger Canoe Club. The couple returned to the Mainland. Dotty Todd died Dec. 12, 2000 after being diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease in August. She was 87 years old. He survives her.
