David E. Yount, 64, a University of Hawaii physics professor who rattled the community with a book about UH politics in 1996, died of an apparent heart attack yesterday Apr. 27, 2000 while playing tennis. "We've lost a key person at the university," said Vincent Peterson, physics professor emeritus. Yount was recruited by Peterson and UH physics professor emeritus Robert Cence to join the UH high energy physics group in 1969. He was previously on the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center staff. Shocked colleagues today described Yount as a dedicated researcher, teacher and athlete who played tennis and jogged regularly. Cence said he and Yount rode bicycles to the university for about 10 years -- Yount from Hawaii Kai and Cence from Kahala. "He was a very vigorous guy, very athletic-looking." Peterson said Yount "went up the line very quickly" at UH because he was "the kind of person you can count on completely." He served as chairman of the Department of Physics and Astronomy from 1979 to 1984, was acting assistant vice president for academic affairs in 1985 and was vice president for research and graduate education from 1986

to 1995. He wrote more than 150 research papers on high-energy physics, diving medicine, acoustics and surface chemistry. He received the prestigious Stover-Link Award of the Undersea and Hyperbaric Medical Society in 1987 for research explaining what causes bubbles. In 1996, his book, "Who Runs the University: the Politics of Higher Education in Hawaii 1985-1992," was the talk of the town. UH Press Director William Hamilton, who published the book, was playing tennis with Yount yesterday at the Hawaii Tennis Academy in Aina Haina when he collapsed.

"He was the kind of author publishers love to work with," Hamilton said today. "He wrote well. He was very logical in what he said. At the same time, he was willing to listen to any shortcomings I saw in his manuscript." Yount had been working on an action intrigue novel the last few years, Hamilton said.

Reached in New York, former UH President Albert Simone, now president of Rochester (N.Y.) Institute of Technology, said, "Dave was a very intelligent and very hard-working colleague who set very high standards." He said Yount often had insightful observations because he was introspective, and "he always tried to be fair and straightforward. ... "He was very willing to take unpopular stands on issues, sometimes in very public places, because he had the strength of his conviction. I personally valued him as a friend and really will miss him." Simone also commented on Yount's "superb physical condition," noting he always wanted to be ranked No. 1 in his age group in tennis. The U.S. Tennis Association had ranked him 6th in the state this year in his age group, Hamilton said. Hamilton said he was at Straub Hospital last night with Yount's wife, Christel, who asked who was going to teach her husband's classes today. "She knows how much David loves teaching and loves his students and wanted to make sure they were OK."

ALICE S. YUEN, 76, of Hilo, Hawai‘i, died Dec. 21, 2000. Born in San Francisco, Calif. Other than her family, Alice S. Yuen had two main passions in life: libraries and journalism. Yuen came to Hilo as a reporter in 1947 and stayed for life. She died at her family home in Pauka‘a Thursday morning after a short illness. She was born Dec. 20, 1924, in San Francisco and was a graduate of the University of California-Berkeley.

Yuen was a charter member of the Big Island Press Club formed in 1967. She revived the then dormant Friends of the Hilo Public Library in 1995. Yuen was the group’s principal sorter, who had the skill of going through boxes of donated books and "finding the gems," said Jane Webb, the organization’s president. Webb said Yuen, who once worked as a library associate after her five children were grown, was "always a book person; a great person," who helped put thousands of dollars into the state library system through the intellectual recycling program held semiannually. Yuen was the wife of longtime Hilo journalist Ray Yuen, who was editor of the Hawai‘i Tribune-Herald from 1964-1973. She worked as a docent at the Smithsonian Institution when her husband served on the staff of former Sen. Hiram Fong. She also was the mother of professional planner Mary Lou Kobayashi of Honolulu, who is the wife of former state Sen. Bert Kobayashi; and Chris Yuen, a Hilo attorney and Hawai‘i County planning director-designate.

She also is survived by a son, Andrew of California; and daughters Lori Sasaki of Kailua-Kona and Julie Cryan of Hilo; brothers, John and Ben Sargent of California; and sisters Elizabeth Phillips of California and Terry Westom of Oregon; and 10 grandchildren.

Friends may call from 9:30 to 10 a.m. tomorrow at Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic Church in Papa‘ikou. Funeral Mass and burial will be at Kalaoa Catholic Cemetery.

The family requests casual attire. Arrangements are by Dodo Mortuary.
