A leading expert on Hawaiian plants and natural history, Lamoureux had variously served as chairman of the botany department at the University of Hawaii and associate dean for academic affairs at the UH College of Arts and Sciences. While working at the arboretum since 1992, Lamoureux continued to co-teach a popular university course with zoology professor E. Alison Kay on the natural history of the Hawaiian Islands. "To go out with him on a hike, it was just eye-opening as to what what he could see in the surroundings," Kay said. "He was very concerned with the health of the Islands, and that's what really makes him so attractive to everyone." Lamoureux was born in Rhode Island and earned botany degrees at the University of Rhode Island and at UH. He received his Ph.D. at the University of California-Davis in 1961, and returned to Hawai'i to teach. Lamoureux did field work in American Samoa, Bali, Micronesia and the Marshall Islands. He also served as a consultant to many agencies, including the state Department of Business, Economic Development and Tourism and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. His book "Trailside Plants of Hawai'i's National Parks" received the U.S. National Park Service Director's Award and the National Parks Cooperative Association Award of Excellence in 1977-78.

UH Botany Department chairwoman Sterling Keeley said Lamoureux was a fountain of knowledge. "He had the most amazing memory for history, details and facts," she said. "It's like losing the encyclopedia of all the things you ever really wanted to know but you don't store yourself." Lamoureux also served on the city Honolulu Botanical Gardens board and volunteered countless hours to help the city's five botanical gardens. Paul Weissich, botanical gardens director for 33 years, credited Lamoureux for much of their success. "Charlie was very helpful, very cooperative, very supportive and was a frequent source of critical information," Weissich said. "It leaves a puka in this community that's going to be virtually impossible to fill." Funeral services are pending.

In 1951, Lau resumed his medical training and attended Baylor College of Medicine and Jefferson Davis Hospital in Houston, Texas, as a chief surgical resident. He was certified by the American Board of Surgery and held teaching appointments at Baylor College and the UH School of Medicine. He also was chief of surgery at St. Francis Hospital in Honolulu from 1959-1965 and 1969-1971. Lau's son, Curtis, said his father was influential in getting accreditation for UH's residency program and helped promote the UH School of Medicine.

"Through his contacts on Mainland, he was able to invite prominent surgeons and professionals to come to the UH medical school program to discuss, lecture and teach," he said. His most notable medical accomplishments were performing the first surgical procedure on an aneurysm of the thoracic aorta and participating on Hawai'i's first kidney transplant team. Momi Minn Lee, former state representative and longtime Democratic Party leader, died Wednesday in Honolulu. She was 80. Lee was born in Honolulu on Jan. 28, 1920, and was a graduate of McKinley High School. She attended the University of Hawai'i, where she earned a degree in economics. In 1941, Lee married Philip Minn, and the two joined the territory's fledgling Democratic Party in 1952. Two years later, Minn was elected to the Territorial Legislature. In 1966, Minn died, and Lee was appointed to serve out the term of her late husband. Lee was re-elected to the House in 1968 and 1970.

For 24 years, Lee was a Democratic National Committeewoman, and she attended every national convention over a 40-year span. She also was a member of the party's state Central Committee and was a delegate to the 1968 State Constitutional Convention.

Long-time Democratic Party members remembered "Aunty Momi" as a dedicated person who lived politics. Former party chairman Richard Port said Lee was a "trailblazer" who led the way for other women, such as Congresswoman Patsy Mink and Lt. Gov. Mazie Hirono. "What I will remember most is the time, energy and talent she provided on a day-to-day basis as a volunteer in the party," Port said. "It was very common for her to work eight, 10, 12 hours a day as a volunteer, keeping books, writing checks and performing any service that the party requested." Port said Lee also was well-known and respected nationally. "I've been a delegate to four Democratic National Conventions, and at every convention, people from all of the other states would gravitate toward her," he said. "It was always surprising to see how many people knew her from other states."

Naomi "Sister" Correa has been a party member for 50 years, and she got to know Lee when the two were delegates to the 1972 national convention in Miami.

"It's a loss, but she left so much," Correa said. "Her legacy was to see that the people and the women had a fair choice in life." Lee is survived by sons, Philip Nathan and Michael; daughters, Geraldine Giffin and Phyliss; seven grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

Funeral services are pending.

Family and friends described her as someone who "was always active and always dedicated to helping others out" through her work with children. For 14 years, Lent was involved with the Honolulu Boy Choir as a parent, volunteer counselor and staff senior counselor. Known as "Aunty Mate'" to the boys, she never failed to make everyone feel special, said her husband, Stephen Lent. "It became a real bonding experience for her to work with them," Lent said. "It excited her to see these little kids become bigger throughout the years." She worked with the choir at every rehearsal twice a week, instilling pride, confidence and discipline, said Blake Nuibe, executive director of the choir. "She was so very compassionate, she had that unique way of dealing with the boys," said Nuibe. "She could be stern, but in this way, only she excelled at - she'd grab the boy, hug him, cry with him." Lent first became involved with the Boy Choir because of her son, Jason Lent. Even after Jason left the choir, she stayed with the group, becoming the longest-working member in the choir. "She was active in everything I did," said Jason. "She was a mother to all the boys in the group. Whatever we needed she was always there." Lent also was a past president of the local chapter of the American Guild of Variety Artists and a current member of the Hawai'i Academy of Recording Artists.

"After she stepped down in December because of her illness, there was a definite void here," Nuibe said. "The organization will not be the same. She was a very fun, a very enjoyable person to be around." When asked what he'll miss most about his mom, Jason said, "Just being able to call her up and talk to her. She always had an answer to all of my questions." Lent is survived by her husband, Stephen Lent; daughter, Desiree Philip Ng; sons, Alden and Jason Ng; and three grandchildren. Kan Jung Luke, self-made millionaire banker, industrialist, real estate entrepreneur and teacher, died Saturday Nov 11, 2000 in Honolulu. He was 86. He was chairman of the board of Hawaii National Bancshares, Inc., founder and chairman emeritus of Hawaii National Bank, and a member of numerous business, military, community and civic groups. Luke was born in North Kohala, the youngest of 13 children of Chinese immigrants. He worked in his parents' grocery store and bakery as a youth, leaving the Big Island to attend St. Louis School in Honolulu. He said in interviews over the years that he knew he would have to work hard to get ahead. "The United States is a place where a fellow can start with nothing and make a success of himself," he said. He earned a bachelor's degree from the University of Hawaii in 1936 and an MBA from the Harvard School of Business in 1938. He was a major in the U.S. Army from 1942-46, then opened a bookkeeping office in Honolulu and began lecturing part time at UH. He became known as Hawaii's millionaire schoolteacher, teaching corporation finance and business administration for 22 years. His first major purchase was a restaurant and bar across from the Army-Navy YMCA in downtown Honolulu in 1940. In 1956, Luke and partner Clarence T.C. Ching pulled off what has been called one of the greatest coups in the history of Hawaii land sales. They bought the 233-acre Damon Tract in the airport area for $4.5 million with just $100,000 down. The purchase stirred controversy, with some protests that Luke stole the tract out from under the Hawaiian Aeronautics Commission. By then, Luke and his partners already owned other property, including in Waikiki, and he continued to build his real estate holdings. But he still taught, telling his students to "analyze" and "never be a conformist." The most important ingredients for success, he said, are imagination and willingness to work. Although he called himself a public accountant, his interests were far more reaching. He created Loyalty Associates, a real estate investment partnership, and Loyalty Investments, then co-founded Loyalty Enterprises, a management servicing company. He also co-founded Loyalty Development Co. Ltd. and Moanalua Terrace Associates, and helped to organize the International Development Co. Luke also supported education, including establishing the Luke Center for Chinese Studies at Punahou School, the Luke Chair of International Finance and Banking at UH and a student center at St. Louis School. For relaxation he enjoyed photography, power tools, working with his hands and playing poker. Survivors include his wife, Beatrice; son, Warren K.K. Luke; daughters, Loretta Luke Yajima, Sharlene Luke Mau and Janice M.T. Luke Loo; and 13 grandchildren. A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m. Tuesday at the Community Church of Honolulu, 2345 Nuuanu Ave. Friends may call at 1 p.m. Aloha attire. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the church, the Rehabilitation Hospital of the Pacific or the Children's Discovery Center.
