Charles Pankow, the founder and chairman of Charles Pankow Builders, died Jan. 12, 2004 at his home in Altadena, Calif. He was 80. Born in South Bend, Ind., Pankow formed his general contracting firm in 1963 and opened a Honolulu office in 1965. The company built more than 1,000 structures from New York to Hawaii, including department stores, offices, residential complexes, and medical and sports facilities. Pankow was best known locally for the many residential condominium projects he built throughout the 1970s and 1980s. They included Honolulu Tower, Craigsides, Nuuanu Brookside, Honolulu Park Place, Century Center and the Waikiki Landmark. Pankow's commercial building projects in Honolulu included Kawaiahao Plaza and the James Campbell Building. Pankow's firm specialized in design-build, which involves putting up buildings at an agreed-upon price and absorbing any unexpected costs. Pankow remained chairman of his company until he died. Over the course of his career, he invented processes for manufacturing hollow concrete piles and created systems for increasing project automation. It was Pankow's innovation that many of his employees remember him for, said Kirk Clagstone, vice president and regional manager of Pankow's Honolulu office. "He was one of the first to start an R & D program as far as construction techniques such as slip forming. He was always trying to think of something new, something to improve or accelerate a project," Clagstone said. Pankow also liked to promote from within. As a result, the company retained many long-time employees. "His whole thing was training new graduate engineers," Clagstone said. "He'd train them for two to three years out in the field and then move them up to other positions like project engineers and site supervisors. People stayed with us because of Charlie and his philosophy." Pankow also set high standards for both his employees and clients, Clagstone said. "The biggest thing was his integrity and honesty and being fair with all that he dealt with. That's what he taught all of us. He was tremendous at developing long-term relationships. He didn't cut corners, everything was first class," he said. Pankow earned a bachelor's degree in civil engineering from Purdue University, where he was also awarded an honorary doctorate. He also was a well-known art collector, specializing in ancient Chinese and Russian artifacts. He amassed one of the largest private collections of Russian and Greek icons in the United States. Pankow is survived by his wife of 58 years, Doris Pankow, sons Charles III,

Richard and Stephen, and daughter Betsy Rue Tegatz, and nine grandchildren. He is also survived by his brother, James Pankow of Indiana, and his sister, Mary Brothers of Colorado. Services were held Friday in Pasadena, Calif. [SB 21/01/2004]

Alice Puluolo Naipo Park - On a Sunday afternoon earlier this month, 35 people jammed into Alice Puluolo Naipo Park's living room in Hauula and started to dance. For nearly an hour, adults and children took turns performing for Park. They were her students, and they were showing her all they had learned. "She was very pleased," said Park's daughter, Soo Whan "Pumehana" Featheran. "It was a nice day. I'm very glad that we were able to do that." Three days later, on Aug. 18, the well-known kumu hula died at home. She had been diagnosed with cancer in May, Featheran said. Park, who started teaching hula in the early 1950s and graduated seven kumu hula out of her Puamana Hula Studio, was 79. "Her spirit was very strong," Featheran said. "It was very important to teach with love ... so that that love could carry through to her students." Park was born in Kohala on the Big Island, and started learning hula as a young child. She became a kumu hula after several years of study under the renowned hula master Lokalia Montgomery, who was taught by a dancer from King Kalakaua's court. In 1952, Park opened her hula studio in Palolo. The school has since moved to Kailua, after a stint in Hauula. Throughout her career, Park tried to not only teach hula, but to make sure her students would preserve it. She also worked to make it more accessible. In 1998, Park told the Star-Bulletin that some teachers that she had studied under as a young girl were so secretive that they would not allow parents to photograph their children dancing. She said she hoped to change that with her philosophy: "Don't hide. Give out. That's why you are teachers." But Park also believed in preserving the form and beauty of hula, and stressed that the title of kumu hula should only be applied to those who have graduated into the position after many years of rigorous study and training. Over the years, Park's halau has competed in several competitions. Park has also served as a judge in many of those events, including the Merrie Monarch Festival, the Queen Liliuokalani Keiki Hula Competition and the Kona Kupuna Hula Competition. She was also active in St. Anthony's Church in Kailua, where she served as a Eucharist minister, and was a member the Royal Order of Kamehameha. Park also took up a post at Kainalu Elementary School as a kupuna. Besides Featheran, Park is survived by husband Thomas; sons Robert, Russell, Radford and Kaulana; daughters Puamana "Kimmie" and Soonie "Mikiala" Park-Ledbetter; sister Leinaala Naipo-Akamine; and brothers the Rev. George "Kahulanui" and Rodgers Naipo. Dr. Alan Pavel, an orthopedic surgeon who practiced medicine and taught young medical students in Hawai'i for nearly 40 years, died Saturday Oct. 2, 2004. He was 71. Pavel was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., in 1933 and grew up in Stamford, Conn. He attended Yale University for three years, then transferred to the University of Chicago Medical School to finish his undergraduate degree while attending medical school, graduating in 1958. He served in the Navy for two years then worked as a surgical resident at New York Hospital. After more training, the desire for a milder climate brought him to Hawai'i in 1966 to work at The Straub Clinic. He later was associated with Orthopedic Associates of Hawai'i which exists today as Orthopedic Services Company. Pavel was a longtime teacher at the University of Hawai'i School of Medicine and continued to lecture as recently as this summer. Pavel won the "Best Teacher of the Year" award in the orthopedic surgery division so many times that he was excluded from the competition. Pavel worked at all of the state's major hospitals and held many key staff positions at The Queen's Medical Center. Close friend and retired orthopedic specialist Dr. Lawrence Gordon, who met Pavel after he arrived in Hawai'i, said local orthopedic surgeons viewed Pavel as the state's "intellectual leader" in their field. "I don't think there is any question about that," Gordon said. "He was as good as they come." Pavel had a variety of interests, from history to art to carpentry, Gordon said. And Pavel, often a serious man, was one of the best joke-tellers Gordon has ever known. For the past 13 years, the two men met weekly at The Wisteria to talk about medicine, history, politics and "every imaginable subject" over beer and sushi, Gordon said. But Gordon said his friend could be stubborn. "If you argued about something and he was wrong, he rarely admitted it at the time but he would come back several days later or weeks later and admit that," Gordon said with a chuckle. "But I can argue, too." Pavel is survived by his wife, Honey Pavel; son David Pavel; daughters Patty Lentz and Lisa Cohen; sisters Adele Scheiner and Nedda Wolff; and three grandchildren. Visitation will be 5 p.m. Monday at Nuuanu Memorial Park & Mortuary. Memorial services will start at 6 p.m. Aloha attire. He was a veteran of both the Vietnam and Korean Wars. He proudly served his country for 22 years. After retiring from the Army he remained at Tripler AMC and continued his work caring for others as a civil servant in the Food Service division until his retirement in 2000. An easy going manner, his thoughtfulness, compassion for others, and wonderful sense of humor endeared him to all who knew him. He had many long-time friends, all of whom he loved and treasured dearly. His wonderful friends are all a tribute to the loving man he was. His life was fuller and happier because it was filled with an unconditional friendship and love those friends so generously gave to him for so many years. He held dear in his heart not only those wonderful friends and memories, but also the joy these memories brought for him. Chester was an avid University of Hawaii sports fan. For many years, he and his friends have been UH Football season ticket holders. He enjoyed the tailgating as much as he enjoyed the games.
