Ben Hiroshi Tamashiro, who with his wife, Gloria, starred in the memorable series of homespun "Harry and Myra" commercials that touched the heart of a community, has died at the age of 86. Tamashiro became so well-known as his Bank of Hawaii TV alter ego that people on the street would hail him as Harry — and he would answer. "I guess it tickled him," said his daughter, Brenda Imoto of Honolulu. "They were being themselves," she said. "Most of the lines were scripted but I'm pretty sure they had some of their own lines in there." But Tamashiro also was a World War II veteran and member of the 100th Infantry Battalion, a tireless volunteer for worthy causes and a talented writer whose words grace a national monument to Japanese-American soldiers. He was born in Hanapepe, Kaua'i, in 1917 and died Friday at The Queen's Medical Center. It was as "Harry and Myra" that the husband-and-wife team of Ben and Gloria Tamashiro became known in Hawai'i and beyond. The couple appeared in about 60 spots for Bankoh during the 1990s to help the company explain new electronic bank services in human terms. The first ad aired on the 6 o'clock news on New Year's Day 1986, but the major campaign ran between 1990 and 1996. "Ben's personality in real life was exactly like you saw in the TV ads," said Alton Kuioka, vice chairman of Bank of Hawaii. Kuioka said the Tamashiros were "immensely successful in connecting with our local customers." "They epitomized the idea of putting yourself in your customer's slippers," he said. "And Harry's Market (their fictional TV mom and pop store) became an icon for small business in Hawai'i." In 1993, when the Tamashiros were invited along on a University of Hawai'i football trip as boosters for the team during a big game with Brigham Young University, they were virtually mobbed on a side trip to Las Vegas, remembers Bankoh vice president Sharlene Bliss. "Going up the escalators, in the parking garage, people were yelling, 'Hi, Harry and Myra!' and they wanted to take pictures with them," Bliss said. "They seemed to be the Hawai'i ambassadors over there." More than a pitchman Even the Tamashiro children were stunned by their parents' celebrity, which arrived rather suddenly after a friend suggested they try out for the Bankoh commercial after spotting them in a Kumu Kahua play they had done as a favor to another friend. "We didn't realize the enormity of it," Imoto said. "Sometimes we commented to them, 'Gee, it's not like before where we could just drop in unexpectedly.' Many times we'd have to arrange our schedules around theirs." But there was more to Ben Tamashiro than his popular public image. After he retired as an administrative officer with the federal civil service at Schofield Barracks, he kept busy with the Manoa Valley Church. He was a volunteer driver with their Meals on Wheels program for 17 years; was one of those who handled all the recycling efforts for the church, loading the cans into his own car; and helped install more than 450 emergency call systems for home-bound seniors. A member of the 100th Infantry Battalion who served in Italy during World War II, Tamashiro carried the scars of two serious injuries, one to his leg, and one to his right arm. The latter sent him home and impaired the use of his right hand for the rest of his life. Decades later, he would pen the moving words for a World War II memorial erected in Los Angeles to honor Japanese-American servicemen. After a nationwide search failed to elicit an appropriate inscription, his former commanding officer — Col. Young Oak Kim, who was in charge of the project — wrote to Tamashiro, according to his daughter. The words Tamashiro sent back were the ones chosen — with a single change. Instead of "internment camps" as he had written, the inscription was changed to "concentration camps." His words live on Though he didn't want any credit, Tamashiro's name is inscribed in the stone "Go For Broke" monument in the Little Tokyo area of Los Angeles, under this inscription: "Rising to the defense of their country, by the thousands they came — these young Japanese-American soldiers from Hawai'i, the states, America's concentration camps — to fight in Europe and the Pacific during World War II. Looked upon with suspicion, set apart and deprived of their constitutional rights, they nevertheless remained steadfast and served with indomitable spirit and uncommon valor, for theirs was a fight to prove loyalty. This legacy will serve as a sobering reminder that never again shall any group be denied liberty and the rights of citizenship." Tamashiro is survived by his wife, Gloria B.K. Tamashiro; five daughters, Regina Tamashiro of Honolulu, Brenda Imoto of Honolulu, Vanessa Miller of Japan, Jenny Hazama of Mililani and Celia Tamashiro of Honolulu; sister, Kay Akiyama of Hanapepe; and seven grandchildren. Onosai Tanuvasa - One of Onosai Tanuvasa's last accomplishments was turning the Pearl City football team into a contender. It was one of many good deeds done by Tanuvasa, who died at 52 of liver cancer Wednesday night March 24, 2004 at Scripps Mercy Hospital in San Diego. Only his immediate family knew the pain Tanuvasa was going through. He didn't tell anyone else that he was sick. Tanuvasa was visiting San Diego and working to arrange funeral plans for his brother Aufua Tanuvasa, who died at age 42 on March 16. Onosai Tanuvasa will be remembered for being one of the best high school football players in Hawaii history. As a running back for Farrington in the late 1960s, he was the first player to rush for more than 1,000 yards in the Interscholastic League of Honolulu (before the Governors left for the Oahu Interscholastic Association) and he also went on to play fullback for the University of Hawaii. "When I was playing in high school, he showed me the film of him running for a 97-yard touchdown," said Shane Tanuvasa, one of Onosai's four offspring. "It was a Turkey Day game against Punahou. Me and my dad asked around a lot if anyone in Hawaii had a longer run, but we never heard of one." Onosai Tanuvasa is also survived by his wife, Lorraine, brothers Watson and Reno, sisters Malo Auelua, Sama Liufau, Kamako Faamatau and Nanipua White, son Michael, daughters Joni and Karli and hanai sons Michael Yamauchi-Yamate and Shaun Wilkinson. "This is very sudden for us," said his daughter Joni. "But we have great memories. He was our protector. We never had any worries. He was the big man who would come and save us from everything." Shane Tanuvasa was a coach with his dad for the last eight years, from Pop Warner to two seasons with the Pac-Five intermediate team to the last two years with the Pearl City varsity. "My dad was the founder of Moanalua Pop Warner in 1987 and he coached there until 1999," Shane said. "He was a motivator. He was one who got the kids to believe in themselves. He told them that most people who fail don't know how close they are to success, that it's right in front of them and they don't even know it." "He was larger than life in many ways," said longtime friend and football colleague Mike Vasconcellos. "I've never seen a more complete person in my life. He had such a good heart. He never did things for ego, but always to do the right thing. I miss him. I miss him now already. "He touched everyone he met and everyone he walked with. He was magical and had that Midas touch. He was one of a kind and they don't make 'em like that any more." A Makiki resident, Tanuvasa was self-employed. He spent much of his career in the tour industry and in movie production. He led Pearl City to the Oahu Interscholastic Association playoffs last fall. Yamauchi-Yamate was one of the Chargers players who won't forget what Tanuvasa did for him. "If it wasn't for him, I wouldn't be playing football," Yamauchi-Yamate said. "He took me in as a son when I needed it. I was in trouble and he helped me out of trouble and to get my legs straight. "I know I'll miss him a lot. He did anything he could to help us players, like a father to us all. He believed in all the players no matter what and he was always there." Tanuvasa was a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and a "very religious person," according to Shane Tanuvasa. "He would always leave different messages on his cell phone about faith in God, and all my friends used to call just to hear what the newest message said," Shane said. [SB 26/03/2004]

AnnaLisa "Annalie" Knaack Tatibouet, an early developer and manager of visitor properties in Waikiki and mother of hotelier Andre Tatibouet, died Oct. 21, 2004 in Honolulu. She was 90. Tatibouet was born AnnaLisa Knaack on Nov. 17, 1913, in Ho-nolulu to German immigrants. In 1919, her family moved to Germany, but Annalie Knaack returned to Hawai'i at a young age after her father died. In 1935, Knaack worked at the Honolulu

YMCA and served as interpreter for French adventurers Joseph Tatibouet and Eric de Bisschop. Three years later, Knaack and Tatibouet were married and the couple spent their honeymoon bicycling from Berlin to the Baltic. The Tatibouets moved to Hawai'i in 1940 and Annalie Tatibouet became the manager of the Pensacola Gardens, a cottage village that was built by her father. In 1948, Tatibouet built her first Waikiki hotel, the 15-room Royal Grove. Over the years, she expanded the hotel to its 85 rooms. Jane Tatibouet said her mother-in-law felt that the hotel should have a tropical look, and each room was built with a wet bar and cooking and sitting areas. In the early years, Tatibouet served as the hotel's general manager, housekeeper, reservationist and engineer. Tatibouet's hard work inspired her young son, Andre, who would follow in his mother's footsteps and later founded Aston Hotels and Resorts. "I learned the importance of top-flight guest service, the importance of sales and obviously the most important thing, hard work. She was a very hard-working lady," Andre Tatibouet said.. Tatibouet said his mother also was a pioneer in the local hotel business and broke many barriers for women. "She had a vision that tourism was going to be a major part of our economy and she saw that back in the '40s," he said. "In those days, getting a bank to make her a loan was a major, major project. They weren't into loaning money to women in those days. I guess she was a good salesperson and I think there were some bankers who saw this hard-working lady, a local lady, and decided to take a gamble on her. Andre Tatibouet said his mother managed many of his hotels. In addition to her hotel work, Annalie Tatibouet served on the board of Bishop Museum and was a member of the Friends of 'Iolani Palace, the Honolulu Academy of Arts, Historic Hawai'i and the Outrigger Canoe Club. She also was a founding member of Soroptimist International of Waikiki and the Hawai'i Hotel Association. Tatibouet is survived by children, Andre, and Stephanie McCall; sister, Ingebord Semple; four grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren. A celebration of life will be held at 4:30 p.m. Nov. 5 at the Atherton Chapel of Central Union Church. Donations may be made to the Friends of the Royal Hawaiian Band, 381 Halema'uma'u Place, Honolulu, HI 96821, or the Alliance Francaise of Hawai'i, P.O. Box 10249, Honolulu, HI 96816. Harriett Jean "Rusty" Thomas, - Friends described Harriett Jean "Rusty" Thomas, a former Honolulu Star-Bulletin food editor, as a friendly person who enjoyed meeting people. "She was a social butterfly," said caregiver Kelly McArthur. Thomas died Monday, Nov. 29, 2004 at her Waikiki home due to complications from Parkinson's disease. She was 82. Thomas was nicknamed "Rusty" because of her flaming red hair. She worked as food editor for the Star-Bulletin from 1949 to 1964. Thomas was born in Kingsley, Iowa, to Elvin and Jean Pratt. She graduated from Iowa State University in the mid-1940s and married Ernest Hayden "Tommy" Thomas in 1948. McArthur said Thomas loved desserts, especially leche flan and bread pudding. In April 1996, Thomas donated a menu collection from her dining experiences to Kapiolani Community College's Food Service Program. McArthur further described Thomas as a sharp, inquisitive person who enjoyed attending art openings. "I took her to the Contemporary Museum for every opening," said McArthur. She also enjoyed dancing, playing volleyball and swimming in Waikiki. Moreover, Thomas was a senior canoe paddler for the Outrigger Canoe Club. She and her husband lived at the Colony Surf since 1961. Ernest Thomas, a Pacific Chemical and Fertilizer chief chemical engineer and U.S. Army colonel, died in February 2003 at their Waikiki home. As food editor, Thomas attended national food conventions on the mainland, where she met actors and actresses such as Lana Turner, Joan Crawford and former President Ronald Reagan. "Rusty was always very happy. She had a nice, big smile with red hair. She was very friendly," said former Star-Bulletin reporter Harriet Gee. "She was a very outgoing person." Longtime friend Teddi Chong described Thomas as a gregarious person. "She was a wonderful person -- very thoughtful, very sweet," said Chong, a Pearl City resident who knew Thomas since the mid-1950s. Instead of a funeral service, a tribute will be held in January to honor Thomas. Arrangements are pending. For information, call 348-8627. [SB Dec. 3, 2004]

Harriett Jean "Rusty" Thomas Age 82, died November 29, 2004. Rusty suffered from Parkinson's Disease for more than 15 years, but she continued to live a passionate life full of energy, adventure and wisdom, inspiring friends she met along the way. Rusty was born in 1922 in Kingsley, Iowa, the only child of Alvin and Jean Pratt. She was later nicknamed "Rusty" due to her beautiful flaming red hair. She had attended McPherson College in Kansas City and Morningside College in Sioux City, Iowa. Rusty then graduated from Iowa State University with a Bachelor of Science degree in Home Economics, her major being in the field of Institutional Management. After graduation, she came to Hawaii in 1946 after a friend recommended her for a food management position at the Richard Street YWCA. She decided to travel to the Hawaiian Islands solo to venture into new territories. While traveling to Hawaii on the Mariposa Ship Liner, she met Army Lieutenant Ernest Hayden "Tommy" Thomas who was stationed in Honolulu and was traveling with his good friend George Cook back to Hawaii. Tommy would later become her husband of 55 years. Before she settled down, Rusty traveled with a group of ten other students on bicycles throughout Europe for a 6 week tour. A picture of Rusty sitting with friends in the Rome Coliseum appeared in Life Magazine. In 1948, she accepted a position at the Star Bulletin fulfilling her dream job as a Food Editor. During the 15 years at the paper, she traveled around the world tasting different types of delicacies and then sharing her thoughts on the many varieties of food. Her travels reached locations stretching from New York, Chicago to Peru, Philippines, and Japan. She also humbly enjoyed mingling with celebrities including the late Joan Crawford, Lana Turner, Ronald Reagan and many others. Harriett and her husband were longtime members of the Outrigger Canoe Club where she enjoyed a vigorous swim almost every day of her life. She also enjoyed playing volleyball in her younger years. She was a competitive sports woman in her day and also paddled on the Outrigger's senior women's paddling team. Three years ago she was under the care of Hospice Hawaii for 8 months. They had tried to make her comfortable with pain medications, but unfortunately they had produced adverse effects on her. When Parkinson's Disease began to take its toll on her, she made a firm decision to spend the last two years of her life free of pain medications. She felt it was more important to keep her mind clear even though often she had to endure pain. Her family of caregivers helped relieve her suffering with strolls in her wheelchair (equipped with a head light) at all hours of the day and night, sometimes as early as 2 a.m. She continued to live a meaningful, mentally active life and was able to attend many educational talks, religious functions, restaurants, and her favorite "Art Receptions" for "Art and Food" which were still an interest of Rusty's. This went on for the next two years with a family of caregivers who attended to her needs every hour of everyday. She also had good caring doctors. With her gentle soft spoken adventuresome spirit, Rusty will always be remembered by her many friends for her interest in the Culinary Arts. Rusty is survived by her first cousins, Shirley Brown and Jan Berg of Iowa, and several second cousins. Donations may be made in her memory to the Ernest "Tommy" Hayden and Harriett Jean "Rusty" Thomas Foundation. A private memorial service will be held in her honor at the end of January. For those interested in attending please call 808-348-8627. [Adv Dec. 25, 2004]

Joseph Curtis Tyler Jr., a former business executive who survived the Dec. 7 attack on Pearl Harbor, died Dec. 19, 2004 at Kona Community Hospital. He was 88. Tyler was a pioneer in the design of the first completely automated coffee-processing facility and also had a part in the development of the first instant coffee in Hawai'i. He was born in Spokane, Wash., on May 11, 1916, and attended the New Mexico Military Institute and the University of California at Berkeley. After graduating from high school, he served two years in the merchant marine, working for the W.R. Grace Line traveling between New York and South America. He first visited Hawai'i during a training cruise on the battleship New York as a member of the reserve officer training corps, and returned to Honolulu a year later to work for American Factors. He married Thelma Weeks of Kona in 1938, and was summoned for active duty as a Navy officer in July 1941. Tyler had shore duty the day of the Pearl Harbor attack, and years later told the story of being strafed by a Japanese plane, said his son, former Big Island County councilman J. Curtis Tyler III. The elder Tyler had command of three ships during the war, and moved to Kona afterward to resume work with American Factors. He retired in 1962 as the company's island operations manager, but went on to work in Puerto Rico and New York for the International Basic Economy Corp. He returned to Kona with his family in 1976, where he was active in Christ Church Episcopal as a senior warden and with the Rotary Club. Tyler headed the citizens committee that developed the first Kona community plan and founded the Full Life Corp., a nonprofit agency serving persons with special needs. In addition to his wife and son Curtis III, he is survived by son Charles Oudin of Kona; daughter Elizabeth Annette of Kona; and four grandchildren and a great-grandchild. A memorial service will be held at 10:30 a.m. Jan. 15 at Christ Church Episcopal in Kealahou. The family requests casual attire and suggests donations to Full Life Corp., 79-7460 Mamalahou Highway No. 207, Kealahou, HI 96750; or to Christ Church Episcopal, P.O. Box 545, Kealahou, HI 96750. Arrangements are being made by Dodo Mortuary Kona. [Adv Dec. 30, 2004]
