James G. Daniels - Retired Navy Capt. James G. Daniels, one of three pilots who survived "friendly fire" anti-aircraft fire on Dec. 7, 1941, died Sunday in a Hawaii Kai care home. He was 88. Daniels was one of about two dozen fighter pilots who took off at dusk from the aircraft carrier USS Enterprise looking for the Japanese attack fleet. Unable to find the enemy, the strike group returned to the aircraft carrier, but six VF-6 pilots, including Daniels, were directed to Oahu. Although the arrival of the six fighter planes had repeatedly been broadcast to all ships in the harbor and shoreside batteries, sailors panicked when they heard the sounds of the aircraft overhead shortly after 9 p.m. Just as the six pilots lowered their landing gears and entered the Ford Island landing pattern, the sky was alive with tracer fire. Daniels was the only one of the six to land his F4F-3A "Wildcat" fighter on Ford Island. Three of the six were killed in the tracer fire; one landed on a golf course on Ford Island; and another pilot's plane ran out of fuel, and he had to parachute near Barbers Point. A model of Daniels' Wildcat fighter, along with his tale, is on sale at the USS Arizona Memorial bookstore. His son, James "Jay" Daniels, said he did not learn of the Dec. 7, 1941, incident until he was a junior in high school, after his father had retired from the Navy in 1970. "We were moving from Ewa Beach to Kailua during the summer of my sophomore year," the younger Daniels said. "That's when he told me the story of Pearl Harbor for the first time." Daniels was the son of New Mexico state Sen. J. Morris Daniels and was a graduate of George Washington University and the Naval War College. He was assigned to Hawaii in 1939 after graduating from flight school. In a speech on Sept. 2, 1995, at the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific, Punchbowl, then-President Bill Clinton noted that Daniels was the only U.S. pilot in the air when war was declared and also in the air off Tokyo Harbor when the war ended in 1945. He logged 4,500 hours, mostly as an attack carrier pilot, with 110 combat missions in World War II and Korea. During the Korean War, Daniels commanded Air Task Group Two, the first carrier wing in the Pacific with nuclear strike capability, with 75 aircraft aboard the USS Essex, followed by a tour as executive officer on the same aircraft carrier. Daniels commanded the carrier USS Ticonderoga from 1962-63 off Vietnam and was chief of staff to the commander of Carrier Division Five. In 1967, Daniels became chief of staff to Fleet Air Commander, Hawaii, at the former Barbers Point Naval Air Station, and later headed Fleet Air Command. He retired in 1970 with more than 33 years of service and later was production manager for the National Alliance of Businessmen and executive director of the Arthritis Foundation. His awards include the Legion of Merit with Gold Star and Combat V, Distinguished Flying Cross and six Air Medals. His wife, Helen A. Daniels, was known to thousands as the "the Christmas card lady" because for 12 years before her death in 2000, she used Christmas cards from around the world to create her handmade scrapbooks for hospitalized children. Survivors include daughter Bonnie Gardner, of San Diego; son James "Jay" Morris Daniels; and grandson James Ryan Daniels -- both of Thousand Oaks, Calif. -- and great-granddaughter Tiara Gardner, of San Diego. Memorial services will be held at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday at the National Cemetery of the Pacific, where Daniels will be buried with full military honors. . [Adv June 25, 2004]

Richard "Dick" Harding Davis, called the "Duke Kahanamoku of hiking on Oahu," died Sunday Sep. 19, 2004 at Castle Hospital. He was 84. One of the former Army civil service worker's nicknames was "Mountain Goat." He built and maintained miles of Oahu mountain trails including Kaneohe's Likeke Trail, which was named for him using the Hawaiian word for "Richard." Among his exploits was descending the sides of mountains so steep that he scraped off all his fingernails clinging to rocks and brush. Because he knew Oahu mountain trails so well, he was often called on to help search-and-rescue parties, said his oldest daughter, Joyce Jacobson. Meanwhile, his own survival stories, from the time he moved to Oahu in the mid-1940s until he stopped hiking a few years ago, were legend. In 1950 while hiking on Mount Kaala, Oahu's highest point, he fell 400 feet and broke his back. Doctors said he would not walk again, but within six months he was hiking again, Jacobson said. "It was definitely do as I say, not as I do," Jacobson said of her father's propensity for hiking alone and getting into dangerous situations. Dayle Turner, a fellow member of the Hawaiian Trail and Mountain Club, called Davis "the Duke Kahanamoku of hiking on Oahu." After retiring in 1975, Davis hiked the Pacific Crest Trail from Mexico to Canada. In 1984 he hiked the Appalachian Trail from Georgia to Maine. Davis is survived by his four daughters -- Jacobson of Washington state, Ramona and Anne Marie of Kaneohe, and Marilyn of Volcano -- and five grandchildren. A celebration of his life will be held at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow at the Hawaiian Trail and Mountain Club in Waimanalo. [SB Sep. 24, 2004]

Dave Donnelly - Honolulu Star-Bulletin columnist Dave Donnelly, who entertained readers, listeners, television viewers and theatergoers in Hawaii for more than 40 years in Hawaii, died last night Jan 24, 2004 in the Queen's Medical Center. He was 66. As a radio disc jockey, as Mr. Checkers on the KGMB children's show "Checkers and Pogo" and as a columnist for 35 years, Donnelly was a part of Hawaii's cultural landscape. "Dave was a friend of the family for many generations in Hawaii," said Frank Bridgewater, editor of the Star-Bulletin. "He entertained, informed and even admonished in his own amusing and, at times, irascible way. We will miss him as a member of the Star-Bulletin family, and our readers will miss him as one of the strongest voices for all things good about Hawaii." Fellow KPOI disc jockey Jack Kellner said: "I think he would want to be remembered as a chronicler of the business and entertainment culture of Hawaii. He was a person who made and kept friends over many years. I never heard or saw him being combative or argumentative with people. He didn't make enemies; he made friends." Donnelly was admitted to Queen's at 7 a.m. yesterday and had been in the intensive care unit much of the day before he died just after 6 p.m., said caregiver and friend Anthony Moon. Survivors include his son, Brendan. "I really feel a great loss," said island promoter Tom Moffatt, who knew Donnelly for over 40 years and served as best man when he wed former wife, publicist Sheila Donnelly. "He was a good guy. He was very bright, sometimes cynical, but always likable." Donnelly, originally of Iowa, landed his first Hawaii media job just out of the Navy in 1961 as a newsman at KPOI radio station. Before long, he was moved to the music desk, where he became a disc jockey known as "The Moose" and was a member of the original "Poi Boys," who helped popularize rock and roll music in Hawaii. One memorable promotional gag was Donnelly broadcasting on the air for as long as he could stay awake, which turned out to be about two days, Kellner said. "When somebody is deprived of sleep for too long, they really go kind of nuts," Kellner said. "It was funny." From radio, Donnelly moved to television. He became "Mr. Checkers" on a locally produced children's show and landed at least a dozen parts, including that of an aging hippie, on "Hawaii 5-0." Meanwhile, Donnelly was acting in local theater productions and trying his hand at writing and directing plays. Friends say the theater would remain one of Donnelly's greatest passions. "When I saw Dave acting, it was another dimension," said Ray Sweeney, who has known Donnelly since the two worked together at KPOI. "He may not have been an award-winning actor, but he was great to watch when he did it." Don Murphy, owner of Murphy's Bar and Grill, helped his longtime friend gather props for Donnelly's last play, "The Weir," which played in April at the Yellow Brick Studio. Donnelly directed the production, set in a rural Irish pub and detailing what two men will do to get a woman. "He loved to be involved in the theater," Murphy said. "I'm going to truly miss him. ... He was a great character of our community." By the time Donnelly came to the Star-Bulletin in 1968, he was already well-known in the community's entertainment industry. The newspaper introduced his long-running column with, "Dave Donnelly is going to write Monday through Friday on the events of Hawaii as seen from his particular point of view." And that's what he did. Star-Bulletin reporter Burl Burlingame, in an article on Donnelly's 30th anniversary at the newspaper, called him "part of Hawaii's cultural landscape," adding, "His column probably gives a truer picture of what's on Hawaii's mind over the years than any number of polls." "He was really a multimedia person before that term became fashionable," said Ron Jacobs, a former KPOI music director who hired Donnelly while at the station. "Donnelly was smart, witty, one of the few people in Honolulu who can justify being called urbane," Jacobs said. "We did some really wild and woolly things. The most memorable moments I can think of are not suitable for publication." Friends also say Donnelly put his work above all else. During a life-threatening illness in the 1990s, someone suggested Donnelly give up his Star-Bulletin column. Donnelly's response, according to Moon: "I'm a professional and I always meet deadline." In 1994, Donnelly had a brush with death when, in his words, "I went for a doctor's appointment at Kaiser Medical Center and my liver seemingly exploded." Two liver operations and a month later, he was back cranking out columns, noting in a 1999 column: "It gives me great satisfaction to note that I haven't taken a sick day off since. Thanks, Kaiser, and thanks to all the many friends who stood by me." Donnelly broke his hip in the San Francisco airport the day after Thanksgiving -- on the first day of a monthlong vacation. "I Broke My Hip, In San Francisco," Donnelly quipped in his Jan. 2 column. Typically, even while laid up in hospitals and rehab units, he was gathering column information from Hawaii ex-pats. Nadine Kam, Star-Bulletin features editor, said she assured Donnelly he didn't have to come back to work immediately after his painful vacation, but he insisted on working, she said. "He was doing what he loved till the end." Services are pending. [SB 25/01/2004]
