Jason N. Baba, a Honolulu attorney and managing partner of Bays, Deaver, Lung Rose & Baba, died Friday in a kayaking accident. He was 44. Baba was born July 31, 1957, in Los Angeles, Calif. He earned undergraduate degrees in business administration at the University of Hawai'i-Manoa, and his law degree at the University of California at Los Angeles School of Law in 1983. Baba joined the Hawai'i firm in 1987 and became a partner in 1992. This year, he became the firm's managing partner. Baba specialized in construction, real estate and commercial litigation. He was a member of the National Commercial Builders Council and was a director of the Building Industry Association of Hawai'i. "Jason was an excellent attorney who worked hard and long for his clients," said law partner Crystal Rose. "He also was a loyal partner, a great father and a good friend." Baba was kayaking Friday afternoon off Windward O'ahu when his family reported him missing. Honolulu Fire Department rescue crews searched for about 30 minutes before finding his body between the reef and shoreline off Kualoa Beach. Rescuers brought Baba to shore but were unable to resuscitate him. Baba is survived by his wife, Marlene; children, Jeremy and Caitlin; mother, Irene Yee Baba; brothers, Jerome and John; and sisters, Julianne Kaya and Janine. Visitation is 4 p.m. Sunday at Borthwick Mortuary, service at 5 p.m. Friends also may call on 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. Monday at Borthwick Mortuary, Mass at 11:30 a.m. Burial is set for noon at Hawaiian Memorial Park. Rex T. Barber, a World War II fighter pilot who spent most of his life seeking sole credit for shooting down the bomber carrying the mastermind of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, has died at 84. Barber, who had been a mint and hay farmer in recent years, died Thursday. Barber was one of 16 pilots in specially equipped long-range P-38 Lightnings who were dispatched 400 miles on April 18, 1943, to intercept Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto, commander in chief of the Japanese Imperial Navy, over the Solomon Islands in the Pacific. American forces had broken a Japanese code to learn his flight plans. Though the American Fighter Aces Association gave sole credit to Barber, the official U.S. Air Force record said that Barber shot off the tail of the Betty bomber carrying Yamamoto and set it on fire. According to the Air Force record, pilot Tom Lanphier blasted the plane before it plunged into the jungles of Bougainville Island. Urged by Barber and his supporters, authorities reviewed the record several times, with no change in the official account. A federal appeals court in 1996 ruled against Barber's challenge of the record. [Adv 28/7/2001]

DR. JOHN E. BARDACH, 85, of Honolulu, died Jan. 24, 2001. Dr. John E. Bardach, 85, internationally renowned marine scientist, father of aquaculture in Hawaii and a leader in global aquaculture development, died Wednesday. "He was a giant in the industry and he wrote the textbook that is considered the bible of aquaculturists throughout the world," said C. Richard Fassler, state economic development specialist. The Austrian-born scientist was a University of Michigan professor for 17 years before joining the University of Hawaii as Hawaii Institute of Marine Biology director in 1971. He served in that post until 1977. He became an East-West Center research associate in 1978, working in the Resource Systems Institute, serving as acting institute director, senior adviser to the center president and consultant on marine affairs. In 1990-1992 he was interim director of the center's Environment and Policy Institute. In 1993, he was named as the center's first Emeritus Senior Fellow in recognition of his international reputation and activities in his field. "You can't overestimate his contribution to aquaculture," said E. Gordon Grau, Hawaii Sea Grant Program director and former Hawaii Institute of Marine Biology director. John Corbin, aquaculture manager in the state Department of Agriculture who was a student at Hawaii Institute of Marine Biology when Bardach was director, said, "He was an inspiration in terms of aquaculture and the potential, not only for Hawaii but for the world. "But the amazing thing about John, not only was he a world expert in aquaculture, he was a world expert in several other fields that weren't even related -- chemical sensing physiology and resource geography." Bardach's interests ranged from sea to land, including Asian art and symphony music. "He spoke quite a few languages and always had a twinkle in his eye," said Fassler. "He had a wonderful sense of humor." He had appointments in the UH-Manoa geography and oceanography departments and was named the Spark Matsunaga Fellow in Living Marine Resources by the Hawaii Natural Energy Institute. He chaired the Pacific Science Association's task force on global environmental change and represented the U.S. National Academy of Sciences on the Council of the Pacific Science Association. He was a prolific author of articles and books on fisheries and aquaculture, marine resource management, global climate changes and other issues. His books included the text, "Aquaculture: The Farming and Husbandry of Freshwater and Marine Organisms," the award-winning "Harvest of the Sea," and the first book on "Sustainable Aquaculture." He received a lifetime achievement award in 1998 from the Hawaii Aquaculture Association. Bardach is survived by his sister, Helena Ripper, and nephew, Peter Ripper. A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Monday at Borthwick Mortuary.

TERENCE TUI A TANE BARROW - Noted Maori and Polynesian art expert Terence Tui A Tane Barrow, 78, died Aug. 31, 2001 at his Honolulu home, leaving to his son Leonard the job of finishing his 21st book. The New Zealand native had a Cambridge University doctorate in Pacific anthropology and worked 20 years as a curator for the New Zealand National Museum before coming to Honolulu in 1964, said his wife, Hisako. He was the Bishop Museum's Polynesian Collection curator from 1964-68 and an author and representative for Charles E. Tuttle Publishing Co. from 1965-85, Hisako Barrow said. "All along, he did tribal art appraising," she said.

"He was very famous -- anyone who wanted to authenticate Polynesian art would call. He got calls from Paris, London, Christie's in New York." She described her husband, who was Caucasian but had a Maori middle name, as "very creative, very knowledgeable. We traveled all over the world together. He has friends all over the world. I had a most unusual life through him." Among Barrow's 20 hardback book titles: "Maori Wood Sculpture," "Maori Art of New Zealand," "Women of Polynesia," "The Art of the South Sea Islands," "The Decorative Arts of New Zealand Maori," "The Art of Tahiti," "Music of the Maori," "Incredible Hawaii" and "More Incredible Hawaii." "His book 'Art and Life in Polynesia' put him on the map," said Barrow's son Leonard, who is studying toward a doctorate in Polynesian anthropology and hopes to finish the book his father was working on the last few years. "As a father, no one could have had such a helpful, kind and compassionate teacher," Leonard Barrow said. "During the four years he was ill, it forced me to hurry and learn his ideas on Polynesian art and culture. "He was open-minded," Leonard Barrow said. "He fought the Japanese in World War II and then married one," referring to his mother, a Japanese native. "We lived in three worlds: Japan, New Zealand and Hawaii," said Hisako Barrow, who will return her husband's ashes to his homeland this fall. Barrow also is survived by a second son, Ken, who lives in Honolulu, and a brother, Dick, and sister, Chic, who live in New Zealand. Yosihiko Sinoto, senior anthropologist at the Bishop Museum, said that he worked with Barrow a short time at the museum and saw him at social events since then. "He is well known about Maori ethnological studies, as a specialist of art and history of Maori culture. After he left the museum, he did a lot of writing and publishing," Sinoto said. "He knows not only Maori, but also Pacific Island anthropology." [SB 10/9/2001]

Col. James W. "The Chief" Bass, physician, soldier and scholar as well as a world-renowned expert in pediatrics and pediatric infectious diseases at Tripler Army Medical Center for three decades, died June 12. He was 71. Bass was first assigned to Hawaii as assistant chief of Tripler's department of pediatrics in 1968 and elevated to chief a year later. From 1975 to 1981, Bass was chief of pediatrics at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C. He also served as consultant in pediatrics to the surgeon general of the U.S. Army, and he was the founding chairman and professor in the department of pediatrics at the Uniformed Services from 1976-81. In 1981 he returned to Honolulu and served as chief of pediatrics at Tripler until 1994. Since 1994 he had been the senior medical consultant in pediatrics at Tripler and was still seeing patients before his death. Bass held professorships at several medical schools throughout the United States. He served on the prestigious Committee on Infectious Diseases with the American Academy of Pediatrics, the editorial board of the Pediatrics Infectious Disease journal and the Executive Committee of the Hawaii Chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics. Bass was the first to demonstrate the usefulness of erythromycin in the treatment of pertussis (whooping cough). He also demonstrated that strep throat could be treated with penicillin twice a day instead of four times a day. He showed that the cat-scratch disease organism was commonly found in kittens in Hawaii, and proved the usefulness of the antibiotic clarithromycin for the treatment of cat-scratch disease. He also developed the protocol used nationwide for the treatment of infants with fever and suspected infection. He was author or co-author of more than 200 abstracts, book chapters, clinical articles and scientific papers. Bass was a highly sought-after lecturer and visiting professor worldwide. Bass was born in Shreveport, La. He graduated from Louisiana State University School of Medicine in New Orleans in 1957 and was commissioned in the Army the previous year. In 1968, Bass received his master's in public health from Tulane University School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine. Bass is survived by his wife Bev; children Paulet M. Wingers of Grand Junction, Colo., and Brian C. Ho of Haleiwa; brother Jerry; and grandchildren James Brennan and Mason and Coco Ho. A memorial service for Bass will be held 2 p.m. Sunday at St. Andrew's Cathedral. A reception will follow on the grounds of the old Tripler Officer's Club. An inurnment ceremony will be held 10:30 a.m. July 17 at the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific. In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to the family at 469 Ena Rd., No. 1901, Honolulu 96815. It is Bev Bass's hope that she will be able to establish a memorial scholarship in her husband's name. Please contact the Department of Pediatrics at Tripler for additional information at 433-6407.

THOMAS EMIL BASTIS, 73, of Honolulu He was best known as a captain of Hawai'i industry, most recently as president of big concrete company Ameron HC&D. But Thomas Emil Bastis, who died at his home here Sept. 1 at the age of 73, was a multifaceted man of many gifts, whose accomplishments included designing a snowmobile for Hawai'i. Born in Minneapolis, Bastis learned about snow early on, and his knowledge was tapped by the Boatel Co., a manufacturer of snowmobiles and houseboats for whom Bastis went to work in 1967. He came to Hawai'i in 1972 for the Telecheck Co. after that firm bought out Boatel. His executive talents and engineering background soon attracted the attention of Ameron, which hired Bastis to run its Maui operations before bringing him in 1979 to the headquarters staff in Honolulu where Bastis was named president in 1982. At the head of Ameron, Bastis guided the firm out of the doldrums into the boom years of the late 1980s and into the consolidation of the industry in the early 1990s. He was an early and thoughtful advocate of mass transit for Hawai'i. His civic contributions included government commissions and United Way leadership on Maui. Bastis helped design two snowmobiles that set records for high-altitude operation on the slopes of Mauna Kea. They were dubbed Okole and Maluna for their habit of spilling riders into the snow. He served in Japan and Korea in the U.S. Army from 1946 to 1950, graduated from Ripon College in Wisconsin with a bachelor's degree in mathematics and physics, and went on to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for a degree in business and engineering. Bastis is survived by his wife, Ruth; sons Jonathan of California, David of Texas and Mark of the West Indies; brother, Charles, and mother, Evelyn, both of Minnesota; and four grandchildren. A memorial service will be at noon tomorrow at The Church of the Holy Nativity, 528 Kalaniana'ole Highway. Casual attire is requested. [Adv 7/9/2001]

John "Jack" Beardsley Jr., an internationally distinguished expert on insects and pest control, died Feb. 5, 2001 in Honolulu while working at the Bishop Museum on an assessment for the Maui Airport extension. He was 74. A native of Berkeley, Calif., Beardsley began his work in Hawai'i with the oriental fruit fly program in the 1950s, and went on to become an authority on mealybugs, wasps and other hymenoptera, a class that includes bees, ants and other insects with thin waists and stingers. During his prolific career, he contributed to more than 500 published scientific notes on new immigrant species. He also conducted research on agricultural pests in Australia, England, Zaire, Nigeria, Central Africa, Senegal, Bangladesh and Thailand. "He was the best," said Dick Tsuda, a University of Hawai'i-Manoa insect identity specialist who worked with Beardsley. "If he didn't recognize the insect, then it was probably something new to the state." While pursuing his graduate degrees, Beardsley was an entomologist in Micronesia and for the Hawai'i Sugar Planters Association. Beardsley joined the University of Hawai'i Entomology Department in 1963 and went on to serve as the department's chairman in the College of Tropical Agriculture and Human Resources from 1981 to 1991. He was a research fellow at the Bishop Museum, and was working with museum entomologists on two biological survey projects at the time of his death. He also was studying the risk of more insects entering Maui with an increase in direct flights to the island. "He was remarkable," said Lyle Wong, head of the plant industry division of the state Department of Agriculture. "As for the work we're doing on Maui, it's going to be more difficult without his help." Wong says that just before his death, Beardsley had "the most fantastic meeting" with his colleagues at the Bishop Museum, and that his wife noted that "he died doing exactly what he loved to do, at a place that he loved." Besides his wife, Peggy, Beardsley is survived by children, Steven, Laurel Breault, John and Claire Leary; sister, Nancy Burke; and brother, Edward. A service will be held Saturday from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Atherton Halau at the Bishop Museum. In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to the John W. Beardsley Fund through the University of Hawai'i Foundation and the Bishop Museum to further advance the field of entomology.

Allan Beekman - Honolulu resident Allan Beekman, author of "The Niihau Incident," "Crisis," and "Hawaiian Tales," died Monday Oct 29, 2001. He was 88. Several of the stories in "Hawaiian Tales," published in 1972, dealt with pre-, post- and wartime experiences of Japanese immigrants. "The Niihau Incident" was about the crash-landing of a Japanese Zero on Niihau in 1941. The New York transplant, who moved to Hawaii in the early 1950s and never left, also wrote features for more than 20 years at Pacific Citizen, a weekly newspaper directed to those of Asian descent, particularly Japanese. The self-taught man also wrote a weekly book review for the paper. "Study is my hobby," Beekman told the Star-Bulletin in a 1974 interview. Though he never went to college, Beekman was a voracious reader, a diligent researcher and a student of the Japanese language. Beekman married Take Okawa, a former Japanese-language schoolteacher educated in Tokyo and Hawaii who collaborated with her husband on many Japanese immigrant stories. During the '60s and '70s, Beekman also worked as a security guard at Queen's Medical Center "I enjoy talking to all the different people," Beekman told the Star-Bulletin in 1974. "A writer shouldn't isolate himself from people but be where people are." Beekman championed the rights of Japanese and Okinawan Americans with articles and several letters to the editor to Honolulu dailies. He is survived by daughters Patricia Beekman and Constance Itagaki, son Bruce and three grandchildren. Services will be private. [SB 2/11/2001]

Right Rev. Manuhia A. Bennett, the former Anglican bishop of Aotearoa, New Zealand, was a respected Maori leader, but he also was a friend to native Hawaiians, whom he advocated for within the Anglican community. Bennett, 85, died yesterday Dec 20, 2001 at his home in Rotorua, New Zealand, after battling ill health for a number of years. "I am very sad," said Rev. Darrow K. Aiona of St. Mark's Church. "We have lost a great Christian leader of indigenous peoples. I had the joy of being an acolyte when Manu came to celebrate Mass. We will miss his wisdom and statesmanship." Bennett's ties to Hawaii began during the three years he spent in Hawaii in the 1950s, serving at Holy Nativity and St. Mark's churches in Honolulu. The son of the first Maori bishop of Aotearoa, Bennett studied at a mission boarding school for Maori boys, Te Aute College, the University of New Zealand and the University of Hawaii. He was ordained in 1939 and became the third Maori bishop in 1968. During World War II he served as chaplain to the 28th Maori Battalion in Italy. He is survived by his wife, Katerina. Funeral services were scheduled for Monday at Tamatekapua Marae, the traditional meeting house on the shores of Lake Rotorua. Condolences can be sent in care of the Bishopric Office, Te Pihopatanga O Aotearoa, P.O. Box 146, Rotorua, Aotearoa; or immediate condolences can be sent by fax to 7-348-6091. [SB 21/12/2001]

Sam Keawe Bernard, show manager, dead at 56. Friends and fans of Sam Keawe Bernard described his Hawaiian falsetto as "very nahenahe," or sweet. When he sang, people thought they were hearing a woman. Bernard, who was the Hawaiian consultant for Tihati Productions for 18 years, died Thursday Feb 22, 2001 night at Kuakini Medical Center. He was 56. Bernard was raised in Kalihi and graduated from Farrington High School, where he was the only boy to sing soprano in the choir. He had no training in falsetto, but his mastery of the singing style was apparent at a young age. Bernard was a familiar figure in Waikiki and had a steady gig at Hula's Bar and Lei Stand. He frequently performed with fellow Hawaiian entertainers Darrel Lupenui and Kekua Fernandes. He was kumu hula of his own halau, Kaululaka, and also was a social worker with the state Department of Human Services. "Sam Bernard's death leaves a big void in the Tihati family," said Jack "Tihati" Thompson, president of Tihati Productions, where Bernard was employed until his health forced him to leave the stage. "I will always remember his beautiful, sweet voice. Whenever he sang, I'd stop to listen." Bernard was manager of the Tihati-produced lu'au shows Mondays at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel and was showcased in Tihati's "Creation" production at the 'uinahau Showroom of the Sheraton Princess Ka'iulani Hotel. "He was an unbelievable kumu," Thompson said. "It was amazing how he taught and directed; he couldn't move around (because of his size), but he could move his dancers. There was not an ounce of badness in him." A fund-raiser is being planned to help defray medical costs, said Cha Thompson, Jack's wife. Funeral services are pending.

Arrangements by Williams Funeral Services. Mary L. Bishop, Hawaii Theatre restoration consultant, died Wednesday Mar 7, 2001 in Columbus, Ohio, her hometown, 11 days before her 83rd birthday. A community leader in Columbus, she helped save the Ohio Theater from demolition in 1969, later leading a drive to painstakingly restore and expand it into a highly successful performing arts center. This led to a subsequent career in theater restoration consulting. A 1986 grant from The Honolulu Advertiser brought her here to evaluate possible restoration of the Hawaii Theatre. Her 54-page report became the foundation for successful conversion of the theater to a performing arts center. The Hawaii Theatre Center board retained her to continue with the project for what became a 10-year commitment. Her help enabled the board to engage New York architects Hardy Holzman Pfeiffer, leading experts in theater restoration, and several other pre-eminent technical experts and restoration artists. She also co-authored the theater business plan and made numerous presentations in the community on saving and restoring the theater. "Mary was very effective at that, and she went on to really oversee the construction and insist on high quality throughout," said Claire Engle, Hawaii Theatre Center board member. "So the quality in Hawaii Theatre you see today is a direct result of Mary's dedication to the project." Her active community interest in the arts transcended her role in theater restoration. Her home here was at 700 Richards St., until her return to Columbus after Hawaii Theater reopened in 1996. She made a last visit back in 1999. Born in Sapulpa, Okla., she married Kenneth Bishop while he was in the Army Air Corps in World War II. His later business career took them to St. Joseph, Minn., and then Columbus, where he died in 1965. Mary Bishop's later work earned her the Louise M. Crowningshield Award from the National Trust for Historic Preservation, a lifetime achievement award from the League of Historic American Theaters and numerous other honors. She is survived by daughter Robin Allen, brother Howard Gordon, son-in-law Dwight Allen, four grandchildren and one great-grandchild, and close Honolulu friends Raymond and Claire Engle. A memorial service takes place tomorrow in Columbus. Contributions in her memory may be made to the Mary Bishop Memorial Fund, Hawaii Theatre Center, 1130 Bethel St., Honolulu 96813.

David Boback, assistant district director for the U.S. Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division in Hawai'i, died Jan. 24, 2001 in New Brunswick, N.J. He was 63. Boback was born in Nanticoke, Pa., and graduated from the University of Hawai'i at West O'ahu. He enlisted in the Navy and retired in 1975 as a master chief petty officer.

Boback was with the Labor Department for 20 years, the last four as its assistant district director. He was responsible for the agency's operations in Hawai'i and all the U.S. Pacific territories, including Guam, Northern Mariana Islands, and American Samoa.

Since 1984, Boback served on the O'ahu Cost of Living Allowance Defense Committee, which protected the interests of federal employees in Hawai'i. Tom Cestare, officer in charge of the National Labor Relations Board in Hawai'i, said Boback was the kindest person he knew. Cestare said Boback also was a master negotiator. "He's one of those guys who was an incredible charmer. He had a great ability to negotiate. Whether you disagree with him or not, he just had this way of winning you over and you felt better for it," Cestare said. Boback also excelled when it came to the everyday worker, Cestare said. "Not only did he enforce the law and respected those who had some clout, he represented all those underlings who had nothing except him," he said. In honor of Boback, the flag at the Prince Jonah K'hi'Ø Kalaniana'ole Federal Building was flown at half-staff Jan. 25. A military honor service will be held Feb. 7 at 11:30 a.m. at the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific. Boback is survived by his wife, Carol; and sister, Hiafera. JEAN TIFFANY YOUNGS BOONE - Artist Jean Tiffany Youngs Boone had an endless appreciation for nature and a love for the islands, said her daughter, Susan Wachter. "She inspired us all," said Wachter, a fiber artist. Boone, a painter of watercolors and pastels, died Oct. 29, 2001 at her home in Makawao, Maui. She was 83. Boone was born on Oct. 12, 1918, in Hartford, Conn. Boone came from a family of artists. Her father, Eugene Youngs, was an accomplished artist who studied with illustrator Howard Pyle. Her middle name came from Louis Comfort Tiffany of stained glass fame, a relative on her father's side. Boone taught watercolor painting at the Honolulu YWCA, Bishop Museum Art School and the Waimea Arts Council. She established watercolor classes at the Honolulu Academy of Arts, where she taught for many years. Boone's daughter, Andrea, said many of her students went on to teach art, as well. Eight of her paintings were purchased by the state Foundation on the Culture and the Arts. "They're really treasures," said friend Dodie Warren. "She was a sensitive interpreter of island scenes and loved to paint flowers." Boone is survived by her husband, Dr. Edward Boone; daughters Susan Wachter of Olinda, Maui, Andrea Wilson of Santa Cruz, Calif., Diane Briery of Corvallis, Mont., and Carolyn Boone of Redwood City, Calif.; and eight grandchildren. Private services were held. Scattering of ashes and burial of the urn will be private. Donations in Jean Boone's name may be made to the Arthritis Foundation, P.O. Box 4284, Pittsfield, MA 01202. O.B. Buckner, a Hilo meteorologist known in the community as "my favorite weatherman," died at his Hawaiian Beaches home in Puna last Wednesday Oct 24, 2001 after a long battle with esophageal cancer. He was 63. O.B. stood for Obama Kujenga, a name he adopted after meeting a religious figure from Kenya. He was born as George Henry Buckner in Indiana, the youngest child of Mary Buckner of Greencastle, Ill., now age 97. Using a General Equivalency Diploma after dropping out of high school, Buckner joined the Air Force and served seven years, much of it in the Philippines where he met his wife, Paula. Later he worked for the National Weather Service on Kwajalein, Marshall Islands, Guam and O'ahu before finding his permanent home on the east side of the Big Island. He worked for the federal government for 43 years before retiring. Then he volunteered for youth programs in Puna, and did much to help troubled teenagers. "O.B. was a special person" said Hilo baker Jim O'Keefe. He met the weatherman he had heard on radio weather spots 20 years ago and admired him "for not having that usual monotone." They became fast friends. A sister, retired Army sergeant major Catherine Juanita Mason of New Jersey, considered her brother "a very unique, special person. He certainly marched to his own drummer. He'll never be duplicated." Buckner, who considered Puna "the best place on Earth," was a member of the Lions Club service movement, first at Waiakea in Hilo and later Pahoehoe. Friends may call from 6 p.m. tonight at Dodo Mortuary. A memorial service is at 7 p.m. The family requests casual attire. In addition to his wife, mother and sister, Buckner is survived by a daughter, Katherine; brothers, Dr. William "Pat" Buckner Jr. and James Reynolds; sisters, Mary Wilson and Laverta L. Terry; and a granddaughter. [Adv 30/10/2001]

Alan Bunin: Hawai'i Public Radio's music director Alan Bunin, 49, died of a heart attack yesterday morning Feb 18, 2001 while attending a national public radio conference in Tucson, Ariz. Bunin had been HPR's music director for the past 10 years. Listeners would hear him as host of Honolulu broadcasts, including a daily "Morning Concert" program during which he illuminated classical music. Bunin also participated in other music-appreciation activities, such as accompanying patrons to hear the Bang on a Can All-Stars concert last year, and conducting public discussions of various musical forms. He played as a violist for the Maui Symphony. Hawai'i Public Radio and general manager Michael Titterton said Bunin was attending the Public Radio Music Directors conference in Tucson when the heart attack struck. He was taken to a local hospital, where he died. "We know the public radio family will gather to help his wife Helen and daughter Natasha, and we also know his devoted listeners and all who knew him will be as shocked as we are at this news," Titterton said. Ann Walker Burns, a member of a prominent family of sugar industry leaders, died June 16. She was 75. Burns, whose ancestors were active in Hawai'i's monarchy, was the daughter of Henry Alexander, president and chairman of the board of Amfac Inc., and Una C. Walker, who was active in community affairs. Her husband, who died in 1988, was C.E.S. "Frank" Burns Jr., former manager of Puna Sugar Co. and Oahu Sugar Co. and later senior vice president for Amfac. While accompanying her husband on business trips throughout the world, Ann Burns collected numerous exotic plant specimens to share with the Honolulu Botanical Gardens. She also worked with the Outdoor Circle and Garden Club of Honolulu. Burns supported the Contemporary Museum, the Honolulu Academy of Arts, Bishop Museum and the Hawaiian Humane Society. Burns, who attended Punahou School and Vassar College, developed a love for Hawaiian language, music and dance. She learned hula from Iolani Luahine and was often asked by her mother to dance for guests. She was also a member of the Daughters of Hawai'i. "She was a woman of great intellectual curiosity and had a wonderful sense of humor," said her daughter, Pamela Burns, president of the Hawaiian Humane Society. "She always asked questions with a twinkle in her eye." Ann Burns is survived by her daughters, Cecelia B. Smith and Pamela Burns; sons, Caleb E.S. Burns III and Peter W. Burns; seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. Graveside services will be at 10 a.m. Friday at O'ahu Cemetery. Donations may be made to the Hawaiian Humane Society or Friends of Honolulu Botanical Gardens. [Adv 20/6/001]
