Richard "Dick" Hagemeyer, former director of the National Weather Service Pacific Region, died Oct. 25, 2001 in Honolulu. He was 77. Hagemeyer was internationally recognized for his leadership in developing the U.S. Tsunami Warning Program. He also was credited with modernizing weather services in Hawai'i and the Pacific Region, and improving coordination of tropical cyclone response in Pacific Rim countries. For the past 19 years, Hagemeyer oversaw weather services in Hawai'i, Guam, American Samoa, the Federated States of Micronesia, Palau and the Marshall Islands. He also served as manager of the Tsunami Warning Program and was the U.S. representative to the International Coordinating Group for the Tsunami Warning System in the Pacific, which he chaired for several years. Scott Gudes, acting administrator with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said Hagemeyer was a "dedicated and energetic public servant." "His interest in NOAA and improving weather services in the Pacific region made him a valuable member of our management team," Gudes said. "Dick possessed that unique combination of technical expertise and an unwavering commitment to his employees and the communities where he lived." Born in Cincinnati, Ohio, Hagemeyer served with the U.S. Army Air Corps. He then completed his education at Parks School of Aviation and Engineering at St. Louis University. Hagemeyer joined the National Weather Service (then the U.S. Weather Bureau) in 1950, serving in Washington, D.C. He held numerous managerial positions and in 1982 was named Pacific Region director in Hawai'i. During his tenure, Hagemeyer ensured that jurisdictions he served received the most advanced technology available. New facilities were built in Hawai'i and new offices in American Samoa and Hilo are under construction or planned. Technological upgrades also were made at the Pacific Tsunami Warning Center in 'Ewa Beach. In 1987, Hagemeyer received the U.S. Department of Commerce Gold Medal, the department's highest award, for outstanding leadership in the Pacific Region. "His knowledge of weather forecasting coupled with his fiscal acumen was a great combination," said retired National Weather Service director general Jack Kelly. Hagemeyer is survived by his wife, Helen; sister, Mary Crook; brother, Bart Jr.; and nieces and nephews. Memorial service will be held Friday at 2 p.m. at Holy Nativity Episcopal Church in Honolulu. Donations can be made to the Richard and Helen Hagemeyer Undergraduate Scholarship in Meteorology, c/o The American Meteorology Society, 45 Beacon St., Boston, MA 02108-3693. [Adv 30/10/2001]

Maile Rachel Hale, among the victims of the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, is remembered as an intelligent woman with a sense of humor and quiet grace. "I don't think there's a gentler, kinder soul than Maile," Diane Ueki, a librarian at Hale's alma mater, Kaiser High School. Hale was attending a seminar at Windows on the World restaurant atop the World Trade Center when the terrorist attacks occurred. Hale, who was 26, also was remembered as a bright student -- she graduated in 1993 as valedictorian and went on to attend Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., where she majored in chemistry. "Her talent for science and business was phenomenal," said Vickie Kirihara, who taught Hale's advanced placement chemistry class at Kaiser. College roommate Kimberly Gilbert described Hale as a talented woman who had various interests. "She was probably one of the few chemistry majors at Wesleyan who spent time both manipulating plastic molecular models as well as improvising dance performances on stage -- or in the kitchen," Gilbert said. "If you stopped by her room, you might find her listening to Hawaiian music, reading a book for literature class or carefully figuring mathematical equations with precise strokes of her pencil." Soon after graduation, Hale moved to Boston where she worked as an administrative assistant for Boston Investor Services. Within two years, Hale became vice president and chief operating officer of Boston Investor Services, overseeing $5 billion to $10 billion in assets, friends and family members said. She planned to attend graduate school after a successful start in her career. Though Hale's work was demanding, her "wonderful sense of humor pervaded everything she did," said Boston Investor Services President Ted Wendell. "Even in the most frustrating moments, the chuckles and giggles would emerge," Wendell said. Throughout her life, she influenced others to appreciate life and always practiced the spirit of aloha. "She made me want to be a better person, just by standing next to her," said her sister, Marilyce. Hale is survived by her parents, Rob and CarolAnn Hale of Honolulu; sisters Marilyce Hale and Martha Hale Farrell; brother-in-law Shawn Farrell; grandfather Nathan S. Hale and aunts, uncles and cousins in Hawaii and on the mainland. Donations may be sent to the Labaree Scholarship Endowment Fund, c/o Williams-Mystic Program, P.O. Gustav Hannemann was born on April 3, 1911 in Lotopa, Western Samoa. His mother, Rosie, was the younger sister of Queen Makalita of Manua, the last queen of any of the Samoan Islands. Hannemann was a teacher and principal in Samoa and came to Hawai'i in the early 1930s to receive additional training at Kamehameha Schools. He returned to Samoa, where he married Faiaso Soliai, who converted him to the Mormon faith. Together, the Hannemanns went on many Mormon missions and helped open churches throughout Samoa. In 1953, the family moved to Hawai'i, where Gustav Hannemann would become one of the first Mormon bishops of Samoan ancestry, presiding over the Moanalua Ward. Hannemann also worked at Sears, Liberty House and Foremost Dairies, but always had time for his family. "My father was an outstanding example of a father that was never too tired to spend time with his children," Mufi Hannemann said. "He was the hardest working individual that I've ever met in my life. I recall as a youngster, as tired as he was, he always had time to help me with my homework. He always had time to come to my ballgames." Nephi Hannemann added that his father's focus was on church and family. "I can't recall him going to a movie, or a ballgame, or any kind of function alone. It always was a family outing or a church outing," he said. Gustav Hannemann is survived by sons, Gustav "Gus" Miller, Nephi and Muliufi "Mufi"; daughters, Faiaso "Titi" Cecilia Dale, Vaofua "Va" Maughan, and Gafanua "Nua" Memea; 14 grandchildren; 12 great-grandchildren; and brother, Tausilinu David Hannemann. Harry A. Hanson, a noted certified public accountant and businessman, died Monday Feb 26, 2001 in Honolulu. He was 90. Hanson was born in Chicago and graduated from the University of Illinois School of Business in 1931. With jobs scarce because of the Depression, Hanson went to New York and worked as a seaman. He worked his way to California, where he joined his older brother John. The two left for Hawai'i on a Matson ocean liner in 1932. Once in Hawai'i, Harry Hanson began his successful accounting career by doing audits for the firm Tennant and Grainey. Much of his work took him to Neighbor Island sugar mills. Hanson, his brother and Theodore Raun founded the certified public accounting firm Hanson, Raun & Hanson. The firm's clients included the Halekūlani Hotel, Foodland and the Magoon companies. In 1981, Hanson's firm became part of Coopers and Lybrand, now known as PricewaterhouseCoopers. After the merger, Harry Hanson worked at Magoon Estate and Magoon Brothers Ltd., where he served as director until last year. Eaton "Bob" Magoon, former president of both companies, described Hanson as a wonderful person. "All the wonderful things of mankind were in him," Magoon said. Anita Carmen Hecht, who resided in a suite at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel for 20 years after the death of her third husband, died Friday at her home in Waimea. She was 95.

She was known as a patron of the arts and was a benefactor of the Honolulu Academy of Arts, where director George Ellis said "she quietly supported virtually every aspect of all programs for more than 30 years." Lorraine Dove, a friend in Waimea, described Hecht as "an elegant, compassionate woman who survived two world wars while outliving three brilliant husbands." Hecht was born July 23, 1905, in Sydney, Australia, but lived around the globe, developing what she called a self-taught sense of world affairs and a fondness for French culture. She was a recipient of the French Order of Merit for her support of French culture and the arts. She met her third husband, Frank Hecht, in Hawai'i and the two traveled around the world. While living in Georgetown, near Washington, D.C., the Hechts became known for having world leaders as guests. The Hechts also maintained homes in Liechtenstein, France and Hawai'i. Frank Hecht, who was national president of the Navy League, was a retired inventor of elevator technology. When her husband died, Anita Hecht gave up their Diamond Head residence and moved into a suite at the Royal Hawaiian because, she said, "it was less expensive." After two decades at the hotel, she moved to Waimea, where she spent the last five years. She put her grandson, Rick Habein, through Hawai'i Preparatory Academy and became a major scholarship contributor to the private school. "She had a great zest for life even though she needed two caregivers in the last several months," Habein said. Although his grandmother often joked with him that if he didn't do well in school, he'd end up a cowboy, she supported Habein in establishing Habein Livestock and Cattle Co., widely known for pioneering organic, forage-fed, hormone-free cattle. A memorial service is scheduled for 3 p.m. Saturday at the St. James Episcopal Church in Waimea, with scattering of ashes at a later date. Dodo Mortuary in Hilo is handling the arrangements. Memorial gifts may be made to the North Hawai'i Community Hospital in Waimea, Alliance Francaise or the Honolulu Academy of Arts. Flowers are welcome at the service. "Grandma loved flowers. When she occasionally became ill, I'd tease her that the hospital room always looked like a gangster's funeral," Habein said yesterday.

James Canfield Heckman was among the few people allowed access to the privately owned island of Niihau as a reporter for the Honolulu Star-Bulletin. Heckman is remembered as a "wonderful writer" with a "great sense of humor" by longtime Star-Bulletin reporter Helen Altonn. He held various positions as general assignment reporter, rewrite man and assistant city desk editor from 1958 to 1962. As an assistant city editor, he would "remind people not to slough off on the little, unimportant stories because every inch of a newspaper costs money," Altom said. Heckman, retired picture editor of the Seattle Times, died Saturday at Tacoma General Hospital in Washington of complications following a tractor accident in his driveway on Easter Sunday, which caused several broken ribs, said son-in-law Phil Lou. He was 69. High school and college friend Bob Monahan, who was also a Honolulu newspaperman at the time, said he "always had a mischievous sense of humor." "He used to really thrive on writing for the April Fools' edition of the student paper that succeeded in getting us all in trouble," said Monahan, who followed Heckman to the Seattle Times. Heckman did military intelligence work as an Army corporal from 1953 to 1955, he said. That duty might have productively employed Heckman's penchant for pranks, Monahan mused. "I always figured that if the military intelligence would have turned Jim loose in a disinformation campaign, the cold war would have ended long before it did. He was a great wit." Lou recalls his father-in-law telling him he was the first reporter to accompany then-Gov. William Quinn on a tour of Niihau. "He still has the Niihau shell lei," Lou said. Survivors include Liane, his wife of 45 years; his mother, Hazel Heckman of Anderson Island; daughters Hollie Macdonald of Gig Harbor and Lael Lou of Vashon Island; and three grandchildren. Fred Hemmings Sr. dies at 85. Hard-working, a loving husband and a devoted father to all of his six children -- these are the words family members used to describe Frederick Mathew Hemmings Sr., who died Saturday after a long illness. He was 85. His son, state Sen. Fred Hemmings of Kailua, remembered his father as a "feisty character" with a great sense of humor who loved to tell stories. "He was quite humorous despite his gruff style," said Hemmings. "But most important, he did the best he could with his life, and he raised 'six wonderful children,' as he liked to call us." Hemmings Sr. instilled in all six of his children a love of the ocean and ocean sports, including surfing and paddling. He had no problem getting up at 5 in the morning to take the boys to a Makaha surfing contest. "He was very driven and competitive himself," said Fred Hemmings, who remembers his father getting up at 4:30 a.m. to get a good spot to hold campaign signs during his first bid for office. "He'd fight for the corner of Kapahulu and Ala Wai," he said. The son of a Navy man, Hemmings moved with his parents to Hawaii when he was 7 years old. An avid paddler, he joined the Outrigger Canoe Club at 12 and in 1934 was a member of the four-man junior championship paddling team. He was a member of the first Roosevelt High School graduating class in 1933, along with his friend Lex Brodie. Fred Hemmings remembered his father pointing to a huge banyan tree on campus and saying: "Lex and I planted that damn banyan tree." The banyan tree is still there, said Fred Jr. Brodie remembered his classmate as a "a man with a wonderful personality, who was liked by everyone." After graduating from high school, Hemmings attended the University of Hawaii. He later joined the Honolulu Police Department, where he was a detective. He was a member of the Army's Air Corps during World War II, and became a lieutenant colonel in the Air Corps reserves. Hemmings worked at various state airports, retiring as state assistant airport manager. In 1938 he married Lillian Freitas of Honolulu, whom he called "the most beautiful woman on Earth," according his sister-in-law, Sybil Gier of Kailua. Prone to giving nicknames, he called his wife "Mother Flower" because of her strong Catholic views, and had a nickname for each of his children. He called Fred Jr. "bully boy," a name he later changed to "small Fred," recalled Fred Jr. Hemmings Sr. was a family man who loved his children, said Gier. "He was adamant about treating all six children equal. What one gets the other five get in equal share." He was also a loving husband who for years went to Mass at 6 a.m. every day in memory of his wife who died in 1983, Gier said. Hemmings Sr. is survived by sons Mark, Fred Jr. and Aka; daughters Cynthia Leonard, Maria Hemmings and Heidi Hemmings-Hall; 10 grandchildren and six great grandchildren. Mass will be celebrated at 9:30 a.m. Friday at Star of The Sea Church. Burial will follow at Diamond Head Memorial Park. The family asks that instead of flowers, donations be made to the Outrigger Duke Kahanamoku Foundation.

Carolyn Hicks, co-founder of Hicks Homes, where the idea of "building on your own lot" originated in Hawai'i, died Friday July 6, 2001] at Ann Pearl Nursing Facility. She was 83. Born in 1918 in Utah, Hicks moved to O'ahu with her husband and two children in 1950, when housing developments in the Islands sprouted everywhere. Her children said Hicks was the one who urged their father, Harold E. Hicks, to open their own housing development business in 1954. "My mother definitely pushed him," said Hicks' son, David Hicks of California. "He would ask her, 'Should we do this or not do this?' She told him, 'It's time to start our own business.'" Within the first year of opening the business in their own home by Maunalua Bay, Hicks Homes was building 100 three-bedroom houses a month in 'Aina Haina and Manoa, said daughter, Sharon Hicks. She said each house sold for $6,240. "Mom knew there was a market out there, and she knew people in Hawai'i really needed housing, affordable housing," Sharon Hicks said. Hicks Homes is now in its third generation. While their father was more cautious, David Hicks said their mother always challenged what couldn't be done. Sharon Hicks said: "She was unconventional, and she had a fantastic mind. She was the one to take risks." In addition to her son and daughter, Hicks is survived by her brothers Louie and Ernie Nowell; eight grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren. A memorial service over ashes will be held on Sept. 28; time to be announced later. Arrangements are by Ordenstein's Hawaiian Memorial Park Mortuary. [Adv 10/7/2001]

JOSE HIPOLITO JR., 66, of Honolulu, Master 'ukulele craftsman died June 10. Hipolito was born in Honolulu in 1934, and started working as a craftsman at the Kamaka Hawaii musical instrument factory in 1954. Hipolito has been praised for the construction and tuning of some of the best-sounding 'ukulele in the world — a staggering accomplishment for a man who never heard the sounds of the instruments. The Kamaka brothers, Sam and Fred, hired 20-year-old Hipolito when he was referred by counselors who worked with disabled people. "Jose was hearing-impaired, but his communication and work were fantastic," said Sam Kamaka. "It was a treat to have Jose with us. He did particularly fine work in assembling instruments and making sure everything was mechanically accurate. "He did all of the tuning by vibrating frequency, so a lot of the quality of our instruments was due to someone who never heard the 'ukulele the way we hear it. "It was an inspiration to me." Hipolito retired from Kamaka Hawaii a few years ago, after 40 years of craftsmanship. HEATHER HO - Services will be held Sept. 30 for Heather Malia Ho, Punahou School graduate, executive pastry chef at New York's Windows on the World restaurant and one of the estimated 6,333 victims of the Sept. 11 terrorist attack on the World Trade Center. Ho, 32, dreamed of owning her own pastry shop and was usually among the first to arrive at the north tower's 107th floor for work at Windows on the World, one of New York's premier restaurants. She grew up in Manoa, attended Hanalei and Punahou schools, and graduated with honors from Boston University, where she majored in hotel and food management and fell in love with the culinary arts. After graduating from the prestigious Culinary Institute of America at Hyde Park, N.Y., Ho completed an internship at San Francisco's Aqua. In 1998, she was offered the position of pastry chef at San Francisco's Boulevard restaurant, which gave her the opportunity to live near her mother, Mary L. Ho of San Francisco. Just a year later, the San Francisco Chronicle food editors named Ho one of six "rising star" chefs. In 2000, San Francisco magazine named her "pastry chef of the year." Ho spent three years at Boulevard and had just moved to New York with her boyfriend, a musician from New Jersey who had been a bartender at Boulevard. Ho is the daughter of Honolulu business executive Stuart T.K. Ho and granddaughter of the late Honolulu financier and real estate developer Chinn Ho. She is survived by her father and mother; brother, Peter S. Ho of Honolulu, sister, Cecily L. Sargent of Sydney, Miyako Hori, who helped make the North Kohala bakery famous around the state for its butter apple pies, died Sept. 2, 2001 at the Queen's Medical Center. She was 97. Hori helped her husband, Yoshio, and his uncle manage a family hotel and start up Holy's Bakery around 1930. The business got its name after "Hori" was misspelled on the bakery's chimney, and the family stuck with it ever since. Over time, the bakery shifted its emphasis from bread to pastries and then its special pies — apple, coconut, peach, custard, pumpkin — that are sold in Hilo and Kona and on Kaua'i and carried as gifts by interisland travelers. The building that houses the bakery and the old family inn, the Nanbu Hotel, now an office and retail center, was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in November 1999. Despite her age, Hori's death came as a surprise to family members, who were planning a 99th birthday party for her in Las Vegas, said granddaughter Karen Ortlieb. Hori, a picture bride from Hiroshima who was born Nov. 2, 1903, was recovering from a hip injury but appeared otherwise healthy, Ortlieb said. Hori is survived by her sons, Tokuo, Harry, Richard, Ted and Frank; daughters, Yayoi Sano and Margaret Hori; 20 grandchildren; 29 great-grandchildren and seven great-great-grandchildren. A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday at Kohala Jodo Mission. A private placement of the ashes will be held later. The family requests casual attire and no flowers. [Adv 11/9/2001]

Chang Hsueh-liang was more than a hero and patriot. "He was a generous man who built a university and hospital in the northeastern region of China," Rob C. Chang said of his grandfather, better known as the warlord who forced an alliance between Kuomintang leader Chiang Kai-shek and Mao Tse-tung in 1936 to battle Japanese troops invading China. "He was a person with great pride for his people." Chang, who would later spend 41 years under house arrest in Taiwan, died Sunday Oct 14, 2001 of pneumonia at Straub Hospital in Honolulu at age 101. "My grandfather has never been an angry and bitter man," Rob Chang said. The family has received condolences from Chinese President Jiang Zemin and Chen Shui-bian, head of the Taiwan government, Chang said. China's ambassador to the United States will be in Honolulu for the funeral, he said. Service arrangements are pending. Johnny Lau Yui-siu, a Hong Kong-based commentator, said for the government in Beijing, Chang represented solidarity between the Communist Party and the Kuomintang. "His passing means the mainland has lost an icon in its political propaganda," Lau said. Known as the "Young Marshall," Chang was a military chief in northern China when he kidnapped Chiang Kai-shek, the country's leader, in Xian on Dec. 12, 1936. At the time, Chiang Kai-shek was fighting Mao's communist guerrillas. After complex negotiations and a verbal offer from Chiang Kai-shek to review the situation, Chang freed the Chinese leader and ended his two-week coup. Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists did later fight in a loose, short-lived "united front" with communist forces against the Japanese. Chang, however, was later court-martialed for insubordination and sentenced to prison. In a British-produced television documentary shortly after he was granted full freedom in 1990, Chang said he had no regrets about what occurred in 1936. "I wanted to be held wholly responsible for the things that I did ... and that is why I went to Nanjing after the Xian incident," he said. "In Nanjing, they could have put me to death or shot me by firing squad." Chang, a leading authority on China's Ming period of the 14th to 17th centuries, spent much of his time reading the Bible and doing historical research during his years in Taiwan. Chang and his wife, Edith Chao, came to Hawai'i in 1991. Chao died here last year. "We are deeply saddened by this loss," Chang's son, Robert Lu-lin Chang, a Honolulu resident, said. "I know my father touched many... lives, and I know he deeply enjoyed his last years on the Islands. He made many new friends on O'ahu, and enjoyed the warmth of the Hawaiian people." Other survivors include a daughter, Pauline Tao of San Francisco; grandsons Jeff C. and Leslie Chang; granddaughters Connie and Terry Chang, and great-grandson, Lance Chang. [Adv 16/10/2001]

Francis Hughes, a longtime Hawai'i druggist who opened a Kailua pharmacy four months before the attack on Pearl Harbor, died Sunday Nov 11, 2001 at the Pohai Nani Good Samaritan Retirement Community in Kane'ohe. He was 87. Hughes ran three drug stores before selling his original business and a Windward City store to PayLess in 1973, and an Enchanted Lake store to an employee at a later date. Born in Carroll, Neb., Hughes was the protege of druggist Henry Beckman, who encouraged Hughes to go to University of Nebraska and invited him to work in a Waikiki drug store when Beckman moved to Hawai'i. To save money, Hughes hitchhiked to California, saw an ocean for the first time and boarded the Lurline for his dream voyage to Hawai'i. In Waikiki, he met and married Mildred Smith, his first wife and the mother of their twin children, Michael and Janet. "He would deliver a prescription to a sick person in the middle of the night," Michael Hughes said yesterday. "He was always willing to help anybody who needed help, and he extended a lot of credit that he probably never should have." He said a favorite family wartime story was of Hughes traveling on a bicycle through Coconut Grove to his store at Oneawa and Kailua Road with Mildred sitting on the handlebars. Soldiers were on bivouac in tents under the coconut trees, and when one jumped out and yelled "Halt or I'll shoot," Hughes hit the brakes so fast that Mildred went flying. Business boomed during the war for the town's only drug store, which provided bandages and medicine to troops stationed behind barbed wire on Kailua Beach. The store also had a post office. Hughes' brother Hyland was also a prominent Hawai'i druggist until his retirement. Hughes is survived by his wife, Mary, of Kane'ohe; children Michael of Oregon and Janet Hughes Rajala of California; brothers Hyland of Kailua and Stanley of Nebraska; and two grandchildren. A memorial service will be held Monday at Pohai Nani Club House at 2 p.m. Aloha/casual attire is requested. Donations may be made to the American Cancer Society, Hawai'i Chapter. [Adv 16/11/2001]

Leilani Violet Kimokeo Hughes, a kupuna and Hawaiian educator, died Nov. 18, 2001. She was 87. Kupuna Hughes, as she was fondly called by her students, was an activist for the welfare of the language, culture and health of her people. Hughes was raised by hanai parents and attended the Kamehameha School for Girls, graduating in 1932. She became a teacher at Wai'anae Elementary School, and also taught on Kaua'i. Hughes referred to her students as mo'opuna (grandchildren). Hughes was honored by the Office of Hawaiian Affairs as one of its Kukui Malama awardees. She worked as a kupuna in the Department of Education's Kupuna Program, most recently for Lanakila Elementary School. In 1999, she was among the first native-speaking kupuna at the Kamehameha middle and high schools. Every summer for 20 years, she served as a kupuna for the summer Exploration Program at Kamehameha, Ho'omaka'ika'i. She was an active member of the Kamehameha Alumni, the 'Ahahui 'Olelo Hawai'i, 'Aha Manaleo, and was a Lei Hulu Makua member of the Hale O Na Ali'i O Hawai'i, 'Ahahui Po'o. Kupuna Hughes was the co-composer of the Hawaiian ballad, "I Ola Kakou, Na Hawai'i ("So That //we Flourish as Hawaiians"), by the OHA Kupuna and Kawai Cockett. Former and current students are requested to attend services, as are members of 'Ahahui 'Olelo Hawai'i and the 'Aha Manaleo. Members of Hale O Na Ali'i O Hawai'i are requested to attend in regalia.
