Donald E. Imig, a former savings and loan executive in Hawai'i, is remembered as a banker people could trust. "He prided himself in helping people get homes," Joanne Imig said of her ex-husband, who died Feb. 4, 2001 at his home in Leesburg, Fla., at age 68. "He often counseled people on getting homes they could afford so they wouldn't get in over their heads. He cared about people that way." Donald Imig, a Nebraska native and Korean War veteran, worked for savings and loans in Colorado and Nebraska for nine years before realizing his goal of living in Hawai'i in January

1962. "He came through Hawai'i on his way back from the Korean War and was so happy to be someplace that had no snow on windows," said Joanne Imig, a former reporter who worked for both Honolulu daily newspapers and is now living in Virginia. "He loved Hawai'i and was determined to come back." In July 1967, Donald Imig left Home Savings & Loan Association, where he was treasurer and controller, for a similar post at Pioneer Savings & Loan Association. Home Savings had merged into Hawaiian Federal and Pioneer's assets were at $30 million at the time of Imig's hiring. Ten years later, Imig was promoted to executive vice president and in 1977, at age 45, he was elected president of Pioneer Federal Savings & Loan, succeeding Charles K. Fletcher. By then, Pioneer's assets had grown to $230 million. Imig succeeded Fletcher as chief executive officer of Hawai'i's fifth-largest savings and loan at the time in December 1978. During Imig's tenure as Pioneer's CEO and president, the savings and loan was involved in many community activities. In 1979, Pioneer turned over the deed of ownership of the historic James D. Dole house in Wahiawa to Waipahu Cultural Garden Park. Also that year, the savings and loan honored Hawaiian scholar and composer Mary Kawena Puku'i with its first Hawai'i Pioneer Award. Pioneer was also the first bank in Hawai'i to use exploding dye packs to discourage robberies. Imig, who already had been replaced as chief executive officer, resigned as Pioneer's president in March 1984. "The savings and loan business has changed a great deal and personally I don't think it's as much fun as it used to be," Imig said in an Advertiser story on his resignation. The quote was referring to federal deregulation, which was clouding the distinction between savings and loans and other banks, making business more complex. Lily K. Yao, vice chair of community relations/government affairs for First Hawaiian Bank, was an executive vice president and corporate secretary at Pioneer when Imig resigned. She was named acting managing officer, in effect Imig's interim successor. "He hired me at Pioneer," Yao said. "He was a dear friend who was a great leader and boss." Imig resurfaced three months after his announced resignation as head of Hawai'i operations for State Savings and Loan Association. He lost his job a year later when State Savings was taken over by 1st Nationwide Savings. Imig and his family moved to San Diego in 1985. Joanne Imig bought a Baskin-Robbins ice cream store while her husband worked in real estate and as a savings and loan consultant. "And he golfed," Joanne Imig said. "Golf remained a passion for him until his death." Peggy Imig, Donald's third wife whom he met in Florida, said her husband had been ill the past year. "We played a lot of golf, traveled and he enjoyed cooking," Peggy Imig said. "We had a wonderful six years together." Funeral services were held in Leesburg and Imig is buried at Florida National Cemetery. Other survivors are sons Bruce of Glenwood Springs, Colo., and Paul of Lakeland, Fla.; daughters Vicki Beaudet of Chandler, Ariz., Gretchen Bergstrom and Maile Imig, both of Los Angeles; sisters Mary A. Root of Lincoln, Neb., and Barbara J. Henke of Leesburg; eight grandchildren and five step-grandchildren.

Clarence Iona - Decorated World War II veteran Clarence Iona, 83, of Kailua, died June 21 at Tripler Army Medical Center. Born in 1918, he was a full-blooded Hawaiian who attended Kamehameha School for Boys and graduated from McKinley High School. As a boy, Iona often surfed off Waikiki on a koa board. He went to work for Honolulu Rapid Transit Co., and joined the Hawai'i Army National Guard in 1935. Iona was activated into the regular Army in 1941 while stationed at Schofield Barracks. Iona was shot in the chest 48 days after the D-Day landing at Normandy but survived the wound and later received the Bronze Star and Purple Heart. After the war, he continued his Army career and eventually retired, as a first sergeant, in 1970 while stationed in California. His 30-year military career took him from the Hawaiian Islands to posts in Europe, New Caledonia, Korea and the Mainland. Iona retired in Kailua with his wife, Virginia, and became the owner of Oneawa Taxi. He also pursued his involvement with the military throughout his life as commander in the American Legion, Post 9, Kailua and as senior vice commander with the Military Order of the Purple Heart. He had a passion for golf and, while stationed in California, he served as marshal in the Bing Crosby Pro-Am Pebble Beach Golf Tournament for several years. "My dad had a presence," said son Calvin Iona of Oceanside, Calif. "He was a warrior; he showed up and he was present. He was not gregarious or loud, not domineering, but he had a certain way of talking to people and making things happen. He also had an incredible memory and could recognize his classmates from the 1930s today." In addition to his wife, Virginia, and son Calvin, Iona is survived by his son Walter of West Covina, Calif.; granddaughter, Moani, and her mother, Maija; sisters, Margaret Johnson, Aulani Isomura, Ella Mae Kupau, Frances Schuman, Elaine Flynn, Maile Kirk and Pauahi Anae; and brothers Lloyd and Winston Kupau.
