Jay Landis, 82, a tireless crusader for Hawaiian causes on the Wai'anae Coast, died of pneumonia May 4 at St. Francis West Medical Center. Unmarried and childless, Landis devoted half a century of his life to improvement of his community. A marina at Poka'i Bay, a public library, a sewage treatment plant and new beach parks came about partly because of his persistent effort. Landis, a grandson of Link McCandless, a former delegate to Congress, contributed the first $500 to establish a Hawaiian language program at the University of Hawai'i at Hilo. As a lifetime member of the Wai'anae Hawaiian Civic Club, he worked for the building of E'ala, a double canoe, now used as an educational tool. He was a founder of the Lualualei Lions Club and president of the Wai'anae Council, predecessor of the Wai'anae Neighborhood Board. His cousin, Albert Silva, said Landis was asked many times to run for political office but always refused. "He steered away from Hawaiian political issues," said Silva. "He concentrated on culture and education." He often testified on Wai'anae Coast issues before the City Council. An authority on Wai'anae Coast history, he was a major contributor to the book, "Historic Wai'anae." In the 1940s, he installed a screen in his back yard and showed free movies for Wai'anae Coast kids who couldn't afford the price of a movie-theater ticket. Landis was born March 13, 1920, in San Francisco. At 12, he came to Hawai'i and lived with his aunt, Annie Silva, in Wai'anae in back of the police station. She became his guardian and raised him along with her own six sons. After graduating from the eighth grade, Landis quit school and moved to Kalihi where he lived with another aunt while working in construction. About 1946, two of his Wai'anae cousins drove their Model-A Ford to Kalihi. When Landis came to the curb, a cousin said, "Jay, it's time to come home." Landis went inside, packed a Pan American Airways flight bag and went back to Wai'anae where he lived after that, taking care of his aunt. "He was always proud of being Hawaiian, even when many Hawaiians weren't" said Silva. "He loved Wai'anae and its people." He is survived by four first cousins and more than 30 second cousins. Funeral services will be at 9 a.m., June 2, at Sacred Hearts Church in Wai'anae. Landis' ashes will be scattered off Poka'i Bay from the Hawaiian Civic Club canoe E'ala after the services. The family requests no flowers. Donations may be sent to the Jay Landis Memorial Scholarship Fund, Hawaiian Studies, 87-164 Maliona Street, Wai'anae, HI 96792. [Adv 23/5/2001]

Kenneth A. Lauahi, 74, an electrical contractor, died Dec. 21. He is the fourth of nine people indicted in the scandal to die. At the heart of the scheme, which stole some $5.5 million in city relocation funds tied to the Ewa Villages revitalization, was Michael Kahapea, former housing official in charge of relocations, prosecutors say. Kahapea was convicted of fraud using friends and acquaintances to set up bogus companies that billed the city for moving work that was never done or done at inflated prices. Norman Tam, the city's fair-housing officer and one of the key figures, died New Year's Eve 2000 of an apparent heart attack. Keith Ringler and Russell J. Williams died in 1999 of natural causes. A suspect who was being investigated died in 1997, before the first indictments in May 1998. Lauahi was to have gone on trial on two counts of second-degree theft and second-degree forgery for allegedly overbilling the city for work he performed at Ewa Villages. He maintained his innocence.

Kim Tet Lee, who died July 30 in St. Francis Hospital at age 88, considered public service his life's calling. Born in Honolulu June 14, 1913, Lee attended McKinley High School, the University of Hawai'i and graduated from Yenching (Beijing) University in China in 1935. In 1962 Lee started with the Hawai'i Employees Retirement System. By 1966, he worked his way up to become the head of the organization, retiring in 1977. He served as a trustee for the retirement system from 1980 to 1986. Lee volunteered countless hours with the state judiciary, and the state Land and Natural Resources department. More recently, Lee spent most of his time as a volunteer with the Employees' Retirement System. It may have been his Chinese heritage, which values civil service highly, said Lee's son Theodore. "Public service brought my dad great satisfaction." The state honored Lee last year when Gov. Cayetano proclaimed July 25, 2000, Kim Tet Lee Day in recognition of Lee's "lifelong commitment to public service" as an administrator and volunteer staff member. Lee was married to the former Emma Tenn, now deceased. He is survived by sons Michael K. Theodore K.; daughter Joslyne K.; six grandchildren; sister Alyce Lo; and brother George K. H. Lee. RICHARD Y.C. LEE - A memorial service will be held Oct. 7 for Richard Y.C. Lee, a managing director of equities at Cantor Fitzgerald's e-speed electronic trading division, who was on the 104th floor of the World Trade Center when he became one of more than 6,000 victims of the Sept. 11 terrorist attack. The New York Police Department confirmed Lee's death. Born on July 4, 1967, in Washington, D.C., Lee was raised in Hawai'i and was a 1986 graduate of Punahou School, where he excelled at academics, sports and music. He went on to Yale University, where he majored in political science and graduated in 1991. At 6-foot-4, 240 pounds, the former football player was visibly strong, but his true strength lay in his intelligence, loyalty, determination and compassion, said his wife, Karen Lee. "He was the best of us," said Rich Huff, his Yale football teammate and best man. "He shared nothing but the best with us, and he brought out the best in all of us." As dedicated as Lee was to work, he also was devoted to his family and friends, especially his wife and young son, Karen Lee said. He would call and e-mail home a dozen times a day. The walls of his office were papered with photographs of his 22-month-old son. In their new home, Lee threw himself into woodworking, building toy chests and bookshelves for his son's playroom. Rich Lee is the son of the late Ronald Lee Sr., a former business professor in Honolulu. He is survived by his mother, Susan Yoshinaka, a retired Kalihi Elementary School principal who recently moved to New York; his brothers, Ronald "Buddy" Lee and Alex Lee, both of New York City, and his grandmother, Sueko, of Honolulu. Auntie Violet Pahu Liliko'i, 76, one of Hawai'i's musical legends and frequent musical companion of Genoa Keawe, died at home March 13, of complications from diabetes "Auntie Violet," as she was known, had a career that lasted a half century. She started out performing in her childhood home, standing on a spiral staircase that her entertainer father built just so the 9-year-old girl could reach the top of her bass. Before she was done she had played for kings and presidents. She became a fixture on the developing Hawaiian music scene, playing such venues as Waikiki Tavern, Waikiki Sands, Club Polynesia, Polynesian Palace, Kodak Hula Show, and a five-year stint on the S.S. Independence. She played alongside Hilo Hattie, Leina'ala Simerson, Pauline Kekahuna, Vickie Rodrigues and Leilani Sharpe Mendez. One of her longest associations would be a 64-year friendship with noted Island performer Keawe. The two were recipients of Duke's Canoe Club Waikiki's Ho'okahiko Award last year for pioneering efforts in perpetuating Hawaiian music and culture. Keawe dedicated a Hilo concert yesterday to her partner, friend and "sister," provoking tearful reminiscences from the crowd. Keawe is booked as a headliner on Maui the night of the funeral, and she expects a tearful reception when she dedicates a few of Liliko'i's favorite songs: "Po'ina 'Ole," "Don't Forget," "Piha Hau'oli," and Liliko'i's trademark, frisky "Chickadee." "She was blessed," Keawe said. "She knew many of the (old) songs no one remembers. I will miss her." Keawe and Liliko'i began their musical careers with Honolulu Harbor Boat Days, playing 'ukulele and bass for arriving passengers. Liliko'i also played guitar and 'ukulele, and steel guitar with entertainer husband, the late steel guitarist, Edward. The pair sang with Alfred Apaka at Fort DeRussy, for 18 years at the 'Ilikai Hotel, and were discovered by Lucky Luck on his television show, "Lucky's Lu'au." The musical duo was also entertainment and worldwide traveling partners with many of the state's foremost entertainers, such as Kekua Fernandes, Ainsley Halemanu, Val Kepilino, Billy Hew Len and Peter Ahia, and many of Hawaii's foremost halau, including Auntie Rose Joshua, John Ka'imikaua, O'Brien Eselu, Auntie Lei Sharpe Mendez, and even halau from Japan.

In 1985, Auntie Violet recorded her first album, "The Liliko'i Family," with her six children. She has passed on her legacy to her daughters, "The Liliko'i Sisters." For a week before her death, after she had returned home from the hospital, "Her kids were at her bedside daily," said Keawe, singing to her until she died. She is survived by children, Violet Ah Mow, Lenore Harris, Ching-Lu, Pearl Gomez, Irma Pruitt, Edward Liliko'i and Elaine Kekahuna; 18 grandchildren; and 22 great-grandchildren. Friends may call 6 to 9 p.m. Friday at Nuuanu Memorial Park Mortuary; services 7 p.m. Or call 8 to 10 a.m. Saturday at the mortuary; services 10 a.m. Burial will be 1 p.m. at Ka'ahumanu Cemetery. John C. Lilly of Kula, Maui, a brilliant but controversial brain researcher who went on to champion dolphins and interspecies communications, died Sunday at age 86. Lilly died of heart failure at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital in Los Angeles. A memorial service will be held Thursday in Los Angeles, with a memorial service on Maui to be scheduled later. "His many friends will miss him," said his former wife, Mary Lilly of Ha'iku. "Their interest in him kept him alive." Lilly was born in St. Paul, Minn., on Jan. 6, 1915. He attended the California Institute of Technology, Dartmouth College Medical School and the University of Pennsylvania Medical School. During World War II, he conducted high-altitude research at the Johnson Foundation for Medical Physics. After the war, he trained as a psychoanalyst and worked on mapping the brain for the U.S. Public Health Service. Lilly pioneered scientific research in the areas of electrical brain stimulation, sensory deprivation and human-dolphin communication. He invented the isolation tank in the 1950s and began using psychedelics such as LSD and ketamine in the solitude of the tank about a decade later. In 1959, he established the Communication Research Institute in the U.S. Virgin Islands to study the vocalizations of bottle-nosed dolphins. He later established the Janus Project in San Francisco to do further research on dolphins. Lilly retired to Maui in 1992. He is the author of 19 books and hundreds of scientific articles, and was the inspiration for two Hollywood films, "Altered States" and "Day of the Dolphin." He is survived by two sons, John Jr. of Zacatecas, Mexico, and Charles of Ha'iku; a daughter Cynthia Cantwell of Paradise, Calif.; a brother, David of St. Paul, Minn.; and Barbara Clarke-Lilly of Kihei and Philip H. Bailey of Kula, both of whom Lilly adopted as adults. [Adv 2/10/2001]

Felix Limtiaco gained prominence for his award-winning work in the city's Wastewater Management Department. But outside the public eye, friends knew him as a man who lived life to the fullest. He died Tuesday Oct 23, 2001 in California. "It was sudden, not expected," city Environmental Services Director Tim Steinberger said. Limtiaco had gone to Palo Alto, Calif., for treatment of a biliary blockage and potential tumor. During the procedure, surgeons discovered a cancerous tumor in his liver and bile duct. He died of heart failure because of excessive pressure on his organs as a result of the surgery, according to his wife, Ruth. The news of his death stunned friends here. "Forty-seven years old is too young, especially for a man who loved his family and life so much," Mayor Jeremy Harris said through city spokeswoman Carol Costa." Felix Limtiaco served as deputy director of Wastewater Management in 1993-94, and director in 1994-96. During that time, he introduced micro-tunneling, a procedure that allows crews to work under the street without disturbing traffic flow. The procedure was used on the Nimitz Highway relief sewer project, which won a national award. He started the Limtiaco Consulting Group after he left the city. Born and raised in Guam, Limtiaco earned his civil engineering degree from Stanford University and worked as a project and engineering manager in Guam, Saipan and the Federated States of Micronesia before coming to Hawai'i in 1982. Limtiaco enjoyed spending time with his wife and adult children, Matthew and Kimberly, in addition to cooking, practicing aikido and playing golf. He and his wife would have celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary Dec. 4. "One of the most remarkable things to me was that at the young age of 21 years, he and I were married and he adopted and raised both of my children as his own," Ruth Limtiaco said. "I think the best way to define Felix is to say he was full of life," Steinberger said. "He didn't let work dominate his life. Services are pending. [Adv 27/10/2001]

Anne Morrow Lindbergh, wife of aviator Charles A. Lindbergh who became his co-pilot and wrote extensively about their pioneering adventures in flight, died at her rural Vermont home yesterday. She was 94. Lindbergh died in her home in Passumpsic, about 30 miles northeast of the state capital. "Mother died quietly in her second home in Vermont with her family around her," said son Reeve Lindbergh in a statement issued by the family foundation. A painfully shy woman, she was thrown into the spotlight of her famous husband immediately after they met in 1927, shortly after he made his famous solo flight across the Atlantic, the first ever. She was a senior at Smith College. He took her flying on their first date. She soon became her husband's co-pilot, co-navigator and radio operator. The couple's flights across oceans and around the world fascinated the American public. In 1932, the already-famous Lindberghs drew worldwide attention when their first child, 20-month-old Charles Jr., was kidnapped and murdered. Bruno Richard Hauptmann, an unemployed Bronx carpenter, was arrested for the crime in 1934, tried and convicted in 1935, and executed the following year. Anne Lindbergh wrote of the anguish she and her husband felt after the body of their son was discovered 10 weeks after the sleeping baby was kidnapped from their newly built house near Princeton, N.J. She described one of her dreams: "I was walking down a suburban street seeing other people's children and I stopped to see one in a carriage and I thought it was a sweet child, but I was looking for my child in his face. And I realized, in the dream, that I would do that forever." Lindbergh published 13 books of memoirs, fiction, poems and essays. In an introduction to her journals, she affectionately recalled her famous fiance as "a knight in shining armor, with myself as his devoted page." Charles Lindbergh and Anne Morrow were married on May 27, 1929, in a private ceremony at the Morrow residence in Englewood, N.J. The couple had six children together. Charles Lindbergh died in 1974 and is buried at Palapala Ho'omau Church on Maui, where the Lindberghs once had a home. On April 20, 1930, the Lindberghs set a transcontinental speed record, flying from Los Angeles to New York in 14 hours and 45 minutes. Anne Lindbergh was seven months pregnant at the time. Lindbergh was the second of four children of Dwight Whitney Morrow, a banker who later became U.S. ambassador to Mexico and a U.S. senator, and Elizabeth Cutter Morrow, a writer and teacher. In addition to the kidnapped child, the Lindberghs had five other children — Jon, Land, Scott, Reeve and Anne, who died in 1993.

Margaret Weiss Littmann, a committed community volunteer, philanthropist and activist on Kaua'i, died Oct. 23, 2001. A speech correction teacher and a school psychologist, she was born in St. Louis, Mo., and lived there and in Bremerton, Wash., and Detroit before moving to Kaua'i in 1974 with her late husband, Sidney. She was founder of the National Association of School Psychologists. In Kaua'i, Littman immediately became involved in programs benefiting women. "She was always interested in helping children," said her daughter, Marianne Ashby. "When she got here, the women's movement was just starting. She decided that if she helped women, their children would be helped." Littmann volunteered with the YWCA and helped found its Kaua'i Women's Center. In 1979, she helped found and finance the YWCA's Shelter for Victims of Family Violence when she and her husband bought a building and renovated it. Five years later, she bought another building and donated it to the YWCA for its offices. Littman served on the board of Island School and established scholarships there, at Koloa School and Kahili Adventist School. She was a member and former president of the League of Women Voters of Kaua'i, and was committed to the education of the public, said her longtime friend, Althea McCleery. "She was extremely broad-minded and well-read, not only about the county and the state, but nationwide and internationally. She was interested in giving people alternatives, choices, no matter what their background," said McCleery, like Littmann a former president of the League of Women Voters on the island. The two differed on politics. McCleery tended to be more liberal and Littmann conservative, but they didn't let that stand between them. "She was a terrific resource, one of these thoughtful people who claimed she was a Republican but I would tell her, 'If all Republicans were like that ...' " She is survived by son, Paul David; daughters, Marianne Ashby of Connecticut and Terry of Tennessee; and brother, Jacob Weiss of Colorado. Celebration of life will be held 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday at 4625 Anolani St., Kapa'a. In lieu of flowers, the family requests contributions to any Kaua'i charity benefiting children. James Wilbur Lovell, retired president of Lewers and Cooke, a decorated World War II veteran and former Hula Bowl coach, touched the lives of hundreds of people in Hawai'i as a teacher, coach, battalion leader and businessman, said his son, Ray Yokoyama. Lovell died Sunday April 15, 2001 in Honolulu at the age of 94. Lovell helped to mold the lives of students, athletes and young soldiers, said Yokoyama, and people remembered him as generous and helpful. Yokoyama recalled an encounter with an old man last year while pushing his father in a wheelchair. The man spotted them, waited, and called out his name. "I'm sure my father didn't recognize him," Yokoyama said. "But this guy was so touched by him that now as an old man he still remembered my father." Lovell was born Feb. 6, 1907 in Hastings, Neb. After graduating in 1930 from the University of Nebraska, where he was inducted into its Athletic Hall of Fame, Lovell accepted a job in Hawai'i teaching mechanical drawing at Washington Intermediate School. At Washington he coached football, basketball and track. In 1933 Lovell transferred to Roosevelt High School, where he taught and coached for six years. At the time of the 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor, Lovell was in the Hawai'i National Guard, which had been activated 15 months earlier. He became the second in command of the 100th Battalion, leading a group of mostly Nisei men into battle in Italy. In accounts of Lovell's war experience, members of the 100th said he was gutsy, took care of "da boys" and was always on the front lines with his troops. His combat record includes Purple Heart with cluster, Silver Star, Bronze Star with cluster, American, African, European and Asian Theater Medals, Victory Medal and Combat Infantry Badge. After returning to civilian life, Lovell worked in the building and wood product supply industries. He served as president of Lewers and Cooke, a major building company, working his way up from manager of the lumber and merchandise department. He retired from Lewers and Cooke after 27 years. He then worked as executive director of the Wood Products Association of Hawai'i. Lovell was involved in the financial settlement of Hawai'i Thrift and Loan and served as interim president of the now defunct Mid-Pacific Airlines. He was active in his church and community and also served as president and director of Club 100. Lovell is survived by his wife, Wilma Reiko (Odo); sons James Jr. and Yokoyama; daughter Maile-Gene Sagen; three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. A service will be held at 9 a.m. next Friday at St. Andrew's Cathedral [Adv 20/4/2001]

Joan Yvonne "Vonnie" Lyons - Kona tourism figure, artist and children's author Joan Yvonne "Vonnie" Lyons died Monday at Kona Community Hospital. She was 71. Lyons, who lived in Honolulu and on Maui before moving to West Hawai'i 21 years ago, was the widow of Honolulu Advertiser cartoonist Harry Lyons, who died in 1989. Aware she was dying of pancreatic cancer, Lyons attended a recent farewell gathering with close friends at the Kona Village Resort. A stroke last week left her in a coma, from which she never recovered, said longtime friend Pamela Parkhurst-Amaral. She said Lyons was "totally in charge of her life" right up to the end and was glad she was given a chance to plan for her death. "She was really looking forward to her next great adventure — (death)," said Sherry Bracken of the Kona Outdoor Circle, one of many organizations with which Lyons was involved. She was born in Burbank, Calif., Dec. 6, 1929, and moved to Hawai'i in the 1950s. Lyons was executive director of Destination Kona Coast and previously worked 20 years with the now-defunct Keauhou Visitors Destination Association. She was a member of the Kailua Village Design Commission and had worked with the Hawai'i Visitors and Convention Bureau and for several developments in Kona and on Maui. Bracken said Lyons "cared for the place she thought was the most beautiful on Earth and did something about it" by supporting outdoor plantings and fighting outdoor advertising. Parkhurst-Amaral also recalled Lyons' passion for painting, noting her oil artworks were exhibited on several occasions. In 1995, Lyons published "Keikilani, The Kona Nightingale," a children's book about a singing donkey that lived on the slopes of Hualalai Mountain. At the time of her death, she had completed a sequel, but plans for publishing it were not immediately known. She also worked closely with her late husband during the six years they published his jocular magazine "Harry Lyons' Kona Coast." She is survived by her son, Douglas Behrens of Honolulu, and two granddaughters. Funeral arrangements are pending at the Kona branch of Dodo Mortuary Inc. [Adv 18/7/2001]
