Concetta J. Riccio - Local garden club pioneer and environmental enthusiast Concetta J. Riccio, 79, of Mililani, died June 1 after a five-year battle with lung cancer. Family and friends described her as someone who "was an excellent mentor and one of the best leaders" through her garden work with the community. Born in 1922 in Rhode Island, Riccio moved to O'ahu with her husband and children in 1963. For 27 years, she was involved with tree-planting projects as the vice president of the Hawai'i Federation of Garden Clubs and the head of the Hawai'i Bicentennial Commission. Riccio was also the secretary for the Kalihi Business Association. "Her whole concept was to get people interested in the environment," said Janet Yamamoto, member of the Aloha Garden Club. "Anything that related with plants or garden work or our flower shows." Yamamoto said Riccio talked to students and teachers at Hawai'i schools and traveled to the Mainland to spread the interest of environmental causes. "She was very generous at her own expense, very dedicated," Yamamoto said. "She'd even take the bus to go from Mililani to across the island to carry on these activities. Who else would be willing to do that?" In April, Riccio was elected as the new president of Hawai'i Federation of Garden Clubs. She did not tell any of her close friends about her illness, said Wilna Johnson, president of the Aloha Garden Club. "She was doing things right until the end, keeping everything to herself and never complaining," Johnson said. She knew Riccio for 18 years. "She was just so involved." Riccio's son, August Jr. Riccio, said although his mother was a private person when it came to her own life, she never stopped giving her time to Hawai'i's children and its environment. "She just liked to see things grow," he said. In addition to her son, Riccio is survived by her husband, August Sr.; son Richard; brother Ascenzo "Hank" Ricci; and four grandsons. Visitation will be held at 6:30 p.m. tomorrow at Mililani Mortuary, makai chapel; service at 7 p.m. No flowers. Casual attire. Arrangements by Mililani Memorial Park & Mortuary. [Adv 10/7/2001]

Robert K. Richardson - Former Honolulu District Judge Robert K. Richardson, brother of former Hawai'i Supreme Court Chief Justice William Richardson, died Dec. 17 at The Queen's Medical Center. He was 75. Funeral services will be held Wednesday. After Richardson was appointed to the district court by his older brother, he became the center of controversy for a 1978 decision dismissing rape charges. In his ruling, Richardson questioned what "forcible compulsion" there was, after the complainant was hit by a car and felt threatened by a bottle by the defendant. Women Against Rape and other groups held demonstrations protesting his decision. In 1980, the state Judicial Selection Commission denied Richardson a second six-year term on the bench. Richardson battled in vain to be reappointed. William Richardson, who spoke to the commission in his brother's defense, failed to sway the commissioners and later said Robert Richardson had been "kicked out for being strong." Longtime friend and counselor Thomas Mui, who represented Richardson in his effort to be reappointed, said yesterday it was unfortunate that controversy and publicity overshadowed Richardson's being "such a warm and caring individual." Mui said he felt Richardson was the victim of secret "character assassination" at the judicial commission. "There were no particulars, and it was like fighting a bunch of shadows," Mui said. Richardson, the grandson of an immigrant from Canton, graduated from Roosevelt High School and the University of Hawai'i, and earned a law degree from the University of Cincinnati Law School. He practiced law in association with his brother, who was clerk of the Territorial Senate and rose to positions of great power in the Democratic Party in Hawai'i. He served in the U. S. Army from 1945 to 1947 and was recalled to duty from 1951 to 1953, serving in Korea. After leaving the bench, he held positions as deputy attorney general and as an assistant corporation counsel for the city. He is survived by his wife, Helen Shim; sons Patrick and John; daughter Mahealani; brother William; sisters Army R., Kahoiwai, Grace R. Wong and Pearl R. Nishimura; and four grandchildren. FRED ERNEST KA'IEKAUWILA ROBINS JR., of Waimanalo, died April 30, 2001. Services for "Waterfront Man" will be held at 6 p.m. tomorrow at Kawaiaha'o Church with visitation beginning at 2 p.m. Robins, who died April 30 of a heart attack at age 67, was an institution on the Honolulu waterfront. He started as a stevedore to become manager of stevedore operations for Matson Navigation Co. During his 45 years on the docks, he served as Aloha Week king in 1966 and as king for the Kamehameha Day parade in 1968. The Hawaiian song "Waterfront Man" was written about Robins by terminal superintendent Harding Parilla of Hoalohalike, a musical group made up of Matson terminal superintendents. It was Robins who named the group Hoalohalike, which means "gathering of friends." He was born March 28, 1934, in the stone lighthouse keeper's quarters at Kilauea, Kaua'i, where his father tended the light. When Robins was 5, his father became lighthouse keeper at Kalaupapa, Moloka'i. Had Robins followed in his father's footsteps, he would have been a fourth-generation lighthouse keeper. But the life was too lonely for him, he said. He went to McKinley High School in Honolulu, where he was a football star. Stanford University and UCLA offered him scholarships, which he turned down. After graduation he drove a truck briefly before hiring out for Castle & Cooke terminals as a stevedore. Back then, loading was still done by hand, and Robins' physical strength became legendary. He worked deep in the holds of ships wrestling alfalfa bales and shoveling cotton seed. He worked his way up to operating the winch that swung the cargo pallets out of the holds, then to warehouse supervisor and stevedore superintendent. In 1964, Robins joined Matson and in 1992 was promoted to manager of vessel operations. He lived in Waimanalo. "He brought a genuine sense of aloha to our work force," said R. J. "Bobby" Pfeiffer, chairman emeritus, Matson Navigation Co., who worked with Robins since 1964. Robins is survived by his wife, Kealiiaukai; seven children and 13 grandchildren. A private scattering of ashes at sea will be held on Thursday. [Adv 8/5/2001]

Carol Rogers, credited with breathing new life into a Kona "ghost town" 36 years ago, died Thursday 21 Jun 2001 after a brief illness. She was 90. Rogers, a lifelong art educator, came to the Big Island with her husband, Don, in 1965. They founded the nonprofit Kona Art Center in a closed coffee mill. They painted the former mill pink and acquired an old Hilo sampan to ferry students home after classes. Their painting and ceramics classes drew students from ages 6 to 88. She and her husband, who died in 1994, coached several contemporary Kona artists, including international figure Hiroki Morinoue. The painter produced a 90-foot mural at the Hawai'i Convention Center on O'ahu and his works have been featured throughout the United States and Japan. From his Holualoa home, Morinoue yesterday said the Rogers trained him in painting and drawing while he was working as a butcher by day and a bellhop at night. Morinoue said he "had all the basics from Don" when he entered the California School of Arts and Crafts in Oakland, Calif. Morinoue returned in 1972 and soon was presenting one-artist shows around the state. He later served a series of residencies from Volcano to Japan. Carol Rogers was born in Richmond, Calif., and had worked as a Bay Area schoolteacher until she and her husband elected to take early retirement to live in Mexico or Hawai'i. Kona won their hearts. Before the Rogers came to Holualoa, a new road had diverted traffic, robbing the town of its vitality. Their Kona Art Center helped revive the community, and today five galleries, restaurants and bed-and-breakfasts have taken root in the picturesque village on the slopes of Hualalai Volcano. "They lived every day for art," Morinoue said. "They had a vision and they revived our town." "People like them come far between," added Kona community leader Norman Sakata. "They just fell in love with Kona." In a 1976 Advertiser interview, Carol Rogers described the arts center as "a happy place." It still is, added Sakata, who said "the best thing that happened to us since statehood was when Uncle Bob and Auntie Carol decided to make Kona their home." That comment came last year when he introduced her as one of the recipients of the biennial Richard Smart Achievement Awards for exemplary community service. Rogers died at Kona Community Hospital, where she had been a patient since May 25. At Rogers' request, there will be no funeral. Ashes are to be scattered some time later, according to Sakata. Rogers is survived by a sister, Florence Cole, and a godson, Lawrence Rehag, both of California. [Adv 23/6/2001]

Janet Rogers - "Taking a day off" was not in the vocabulary of lei shop owner Janet Roberts. "What a hardworking woman," said Lloyd Roberts, her husband of 42 years who said she worked as early and as late as she could each day. Roberts, proprietor of Jenny's Lei & Flowers shop at 65 N. Beretania St. died Friday Nov 23, 2001 at her home in Honolulu. She was 75. Roberts was born on Nov. 4, 1926, to Fook Shing and Kam Lee Lau in a Chinatown building next door to the one where she later ran her lei shop and lived. Roberts, who started stringing flowers together at 8 years old, came from a family involved in the lei business for many years. Her brothers, Raymond and Henry Lau, were also owners of Cindy's and Sweetheart's lei shops in Chinatown. Roberts and her husband had bought a lei shop called Jenny's on Maunakea and Pauahi streets and later moved it to a space on Beretania Street in March 1991. Daughter-in-law Vel Roberts said: "She worked seven days a week. She didn't know what a day off was." Throughout the years, Roberts developed a rapport with her regular customers. Customer Jonathan Bradshaw said: "She would always give me advice. She was always willing to listen." The couple lived above the shop until Roberts suffered injuries from an accident in October 2000. Roberts was hit by a van that jumped the curb, veered into her store and pinned her against the refrigerator. She returned to work in June, but family members said she had difficulty walking from place to place. "She never fully recovered from the accident," said her son Lloyd Steven Roberts. The day she died, there was talk of closing the store for the day, but employees kept the shop open because they knew it would have pleased Roberts. "She's going to be so missed ... "It's going to be hard to get used to the fact she's gone," said her husband. "I know she's with God." Roberts is also survived by sons Henry Dean and Jimmy Wayne; brother George Lau; sisters Loretta Korzon and Doris Lyman; sisters-in-law Cindy Lau and Sweetheart Lau; daughters-in-law Ververdee Roberts and Michelle Roberts, eight grandchildren and many nieces and nephews. Francis Ruivivar, who played the leading man in two Broadway musicals and is said to have inspired many other Islanders to seek roles on the Great White Way, died Wednesday in Las Vegas. He was 40. Ruivivar, the younger brother of Society of Seven leader Tony Ruivivar, had been battling chronic myelogenous leukemia at MountainView Hospital in Las Vegas. He also is survived by his wife, Cathryn Croft, a Las Vegas singer. "Of all of us, he was the most talented," said Tony Ruivivar, who returned from Las Vegas to perform with the SOS on the Big Island this weekend. "He was special, he always lit up the place," he said. "We always liked to be around him; he was always full of fun." Francis Ruivivar was the first Asian actor-singer to portray the engineer in the long-running "Miss Saigon" musical, taking over the lead role created by Jonathan Pryce, who was cast in the Eurasian role amid controversy among the Asian-American community who objected to the producers hiring a non-Asian for the part. Ruivivar also originated the role of Lord Toranaga in "Shogun, the Musical," a short-lived musical based on the novel by James Clavell. Fran Kirk, executive vice president of Outrigger Entertainment, which manages the Society of Seven showroom, said the SOS family is grieving its latest tragedy. Tony is the sole survivor of the Ruivivar clan. Cancer claimed both parents as well as the other two sons: Benny, who was lead singer of the SOS precursor band, the Fabulous Echoes, in 1998; and Danny, the SOS drummer, in 1971. Kirk's oldest son, Michael, grew up with Francis and a group of SOS offspring that came to be known as the "Rock House

Gang." The name came from a large stone house the SOS rented when the group was playing Lake Tahoe, she said. Francis, born Dec. 21, 1960, was the eldest in the group, primarily consisting of the band's children, including Martin Nievera, son of Roberto Nievera. "The kids would sometimes get together," she recalled. "They would try to do 'Goin' Out of My Head' the way the SOS did it... you could tell that Martin and Francis were little hams. "He (Francis) opened doors for so many other Asian performers."After graduating from Kalani High School in 1979, Ruivivar earned a bachelor of fine arts degree from Loretto Heights College in Denver. He bypassed the traditional actor's routine of toiling in community theater productions before making the big leap to the Broadway scene. His success spurred the local acting community to aspire for Broadway roles, particularly in "Miss Saigon," the production that ultimately hired scores of local performers before closing last New Year's Eve. Over the years, Ruivivar co-starred in Stephen Sondheim's "Passion," played Old Deuteronomy in a touring company of "Cats" and did off-stage vocals for the Broadway hit, "Starlight Express." He toured extensively in "The Music of Andrew Lloyd Webber," co-starring with Sarah Brightman, the original Christine in "The Phantom of the Opera," in a popular montage of Lloyd Webber music from his hit shows. Ruivivar also played the Cowardly Lion in a revival of "The Wizard of Oz." His most recent theatrical extravaganza was the Las Vegas-based "Notre Dame de Paris" — the show ended its seven-month run at the Paris Las Vegas in July. He made brief Waikiki appearances in special musical revues at the Outrigger Reef Towers' Polynesian Palace, where he also coached and directed segments of the "Yes! Encore" production still in residency there. Before becoming too weak to work in March, he had been mentoring and choreographing the new Society of Seven Las Vegas show band. But Kirk still can recall the young child whom she met when the SOS first moved to Honolulu."My memory of Francis is this impish, talented child with the big brown eyes," she said, adding that he exhibited his humor at his brother's birthday party in Las Vegas a few years ago. The group rounded up some lighted yo-yos; Francis played with them while everyone sang "You Light Up My Life." "Frank was a light in a lot of people's lives," she said.Funeral services, planned for Honolulu and New York, are pending. Survivors also include nephews and nieces. [Adv 25/5/2001]
