Donald W.S. Lau, an entrepreneur who built a neighborhood grocery store into one the biggest meat processing companies in the state, died Dec. 24, 2002 in the Queen's Medical Center. He was 75. Lau took over the Palama Meat & Grocery store in the early 1950s and began supplying meat to local businesses and schools in Kalihi. The state wanted one company to supply schools all over Oahu and Lau took out loans to expand his business and get the contract, said Eric Ching, who worked for Lau at Palama Meat Co. "Once he got one contract, it lead to another one," Ching said. "The business was able to grow from there." When Lau sold the business in 1997, it was a $34 million a year wholesale food operation with 100 employees. In addition to supplying meat to schools both public and private, Palama Meat Co. also supplies meat to hotels, restaurants and supermarkets. It also sells May's brand products and Hawaiian Warrior beef jerky. "He's a wonderful human being, an outstanding businessman and community leader," said Joe Azzaro, of H&W Foods, the company that acquired Palama Meat Co. "I know (that) the business community in particular and the agricultural industry will miss him." Even after Lau retired from the meat business, he started up another food operation -- May's Wonder Gardens Hawaii, the first large-scale hydroponic lettuce farm and processing plant in Hawaii. May's supplies lettuce to McDonald's and to supermarkets statewide. "He's always had ideas about business, new ideas, new areas to explore," Ching said. "He was at one time negotiating with the Chinese government to build a chicken plant in China." Lau was born in Honolulu on Feb. 16, 1927. He is survived by his wife, Bernadette; son, Duane; daughter, Donamay Guinasso; brother, Henry; and six grandchildren. Mass will be celebrated at 11:15 a.m. Friday at St. Pius X Catholic Church in Manoa. Burial will follow at Diamond Head Memorial Park Cemetery at 1 p.m. The family requests that aloha attire be worn. Randall "Randy" H. Lee - Small-business man Randall "Randy" H. Lee, president of Chock's TV and Appliance, will be remembered at services at 11 a.m. tomorrow in Honolulu. Lee, 54, of Honolulu, died Nov. 11, 2002, after a courageous fight against cancer, as he underwent chemotherapy in an effort to qualify for a bone marrow transplant. He was also brave in business, maneuvering the family company to compete with the onslaught of big-box retailers that have made huge inroads in the appliance and electronics fields. Lee grew up in the family business under the tutelage of his father, William "Bill" Wai Lum Lee, and joined the business full time in 1967 after attending Roosevelt High School. "But it was not a cushy thing," Chock's business consultant Kevin Martin said yesterday. "His father had very high expectations, and Randy did everything in the business, driving the delivery truck, unloading merchandise, keeping track of inventory." Lee also picked up his father's insistence on providing a solution for any customer who had a problem. "If there was merchandise that the supplier had dropped, and the customer was upset, Randy could defuse even the most difficult situations," Martin said. He was "actually too nice for business," said longtime friend and former Chock's employee Vernon Chong. "He was such a nice guy that I think he always had the urge to give in to a customer asking for a lower price." Away from the store, Chong said, Lee was young at heart, participating in as many activities as he could — body-surfing with his children, collecting and tending tropical fish for aquariums at home and at the store, and collecting pocket watches. Diagnosed earlier this year with lymphoma, Lee was hopeful of getting a bone-marrow transplant, even though that would have given him only a 50 percent chance of living another five years, Chong said. "The handwriting was on the wall, but he faced his illness with a lot of dignity and grace. He would always ask about the other people at the hospital, asking how they were that day, and encouraging them to have a good attitude," Chong said. Lee is survived by his wife, Mi Wha (Vivian); son, Matthew, and daughter, Sara Ann; his father, and his mother, Mildred Lau Lee; and his sister, Sue Ann. Visitation begins at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow at Diamond Head Mortuary, with services at 11 a.m. and burial to follow. Casual attire is requested. [Adv 21/11/2002]

The Rev. Gerard J. Leicht, who worked in Hawai'i for more than 50 years as a Roman Catholic priest, died here Thursday. He was 82. Leicht was an anti-abortion activist and supporter of many Catholic organizations including the Knights of Columbus, the Holy Name Society and the Legion of Mary. He also supported the Promise Keepers, a fundamentalist Christian men's organization, and spoke at its rally here in 1997. He moved to Hawai'i in 1946, one year after his ordination. His enthusiasm for the people of the church of Hawai'i was marked by high energy and a deep sense of service. I will miss him terribly. His courage and his convictions were legendary." Leicht was born in Rochester, N.Y. One of his sisters, Domitila, became a nun. Anita Liptak - When Anita Liptak ordered T-shirts for her Kaneohe Neighborhood Board campaign, they came back reading "Vote Anita Liptak, Neighborhood Broad." Instead of returning the shirts to have the typo fixed, Liptak and her supporters wore them proudly -- and she won the election. Liptak's friends and colleagues remember the retired printing executive as feisty, funny, fearless and a fighter. She died Saturday April 6, 2002, a few days shy of her 74th birthday. Lee Schaller, a close friend of Liptak's, said the two women met at the Honolulu Press Club, where Liptak was an active member, participating in the annual Gridiron shows. "She was one of a kind," Schaller said. "She was a real character." A graduate of Middlebury College in Vermont, Liptak moved to Hawaii in the 1950s after working with avant-garde music producer Stan Freeburg and at the New Yorker magazine, Schaller said. She came to Hawaii as an account executive for Boland Associates Ltd. and became an account executive and director of Len Carey Inc. She was also an account executive at the Lennen & Newell Inc. advertising agency, editor of the Farm Journal and public relations director for the former Island Holidays Hotels chain. She spent many years at Honolulu Magazine and Tongg Publishing -- later Hagadone Printing Co. -- from where she retired after more than 30 years. Jonelle Rezantes, director of publications at Hagadone, described Liptak as witty, sharp and often surprising. "Anita was very resistant to computers," Rezantes said, describing the typewriter and pencils Liptak insisted on using. Liptak was angry when Rezantes put a computer on her desk and would put her sweater over it, Rezantes said. After Liptak retired in December 2000, "she went out and bought a computer at home," took computer classes at Honolulu Community College and was learning to build Web pages, Rezantes said. "She was in her 70s and she finally took it up," she said. As a board member of the Hawaii Publishers Association, Liptak emceed the annual Pa'i Awards ceremony with Trade Publishing Ltd. Jim Wilson, publisher of the Hawaii Tribune-Herald said Liptak will be honored April 23 at the Pa'i Awards ceremony, for which Liptak was already writing the script. "She was a great woman, she's just very feisty," Wilson said. Schaller said she will honor Liptak's desire to have a good party for close friends instead of funeral services. Longtime friends and associates interested in attending should call Schaller at 395-1839. [SB 9/4/2002]

Frank W.C. Loo - Veteran lawmaker Frank W.C. Loo, known for his flamboyance and colorful oratory, died Sunday Dec 29, 2002. He was 80. "He was a very independent person and was not part of any bloc," Kekoa Kaapu, who served with Loo on the City Council for one term. "He decided on the merits of things and was not afraid to stand his ground. Although we disagreed on things, I very much admired his fortitude." Loo, a Democrat, served three terms on the Council, representing the Downtown-Kalihi-Nuuanu district from 1971 to 1982. He also served the Alewa Heights-Puunui district in the state House from 1959 to 1966, and was a delegate to the 1968 state Constitutional Convention. Loo was often the sole dissenting vote on the Council, and considered himself a political outsider. But his vote was often wooed as the swing vote. Probably the most publicly visible and controversial action Loo took was supporting the investigation of then-Mayor Frank Fasi in the Kukui Plaza scandal, said Kaapu. Former House Speaker Elmer Cravalho reprimanded Loo in 1965 after he claimed credit for the state's new Uniform Commercial Code, which colleagues called grandstanding. In 1981, Loo wrestled with a woman in a Council committee demonstration of how pepper spray could be used to ward off attackers. Kaapu recalled that "whenever (Loo) was running for office, he always seemed to break a leg." Loo hobbled around on crutches but could dash up the stairs as he canvassed the neighborhood, Kaapu said. Loo even used photos of himself with crutches in political ads. Loo was defeated in 1982 when he made his fourth bid for re-election to the City Council. Born Nov. 20, 1922 in Honolulu, Loo was the eldest of 12 children. Upon graduation from St. Louis College in 1941, he worked as a machinist at Pearl Harbor Naval Shipyard. During World War II he served in the Pacific as a Navy Reserve midshipman. Later, Loo attended the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, where he graduated with an engineering degree. He then attended the University of Ohio for his pre-law credits and received a scholarship to Yale Law School, where he earned his law degree. He returned to Hawaii in 1952 to practice law with the firm of Levinson & Cobb, and set up his own practice in 1953. Loo was selected by the U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce in 1956 as one of the 10 outstanding young men in America.

Gov. William Quinn appointed Loo in 1957 to the Territorial Civil Service Commission, which he left to run for the state Senate that year. He was also president of Aloha Loan & Mortgage. Loo was suspended in 1986 from practicing law for 18 months for failing to inform his clients on the status of their cases and for taking part of his attorney's fees from his client's no-fault insurance benefits. Services are scheduled for Tuesday at the Co-Cathedral of St. Theresa at 712 N. School St., with visitation beginning at 5:30 p.m. No flowers, but the family is accepting donations to a scholarship in Loo's honor at Saint Louis School. Librada Del Castillo Luis, 92, a longtime leader in the Big Island's Filipino community, died Tuesday April 30, 2002 at home after months of hospice care. Luis was an early advocate for women, urging them to pursue their goals and seek leadership roles in the community, said former Hawai'i County Councilwoman Josephine De Luz. "She spoke out, always. She was a character and she was a tremendous force," De Luz said. "She meant so much to Hilo. She helped so many young women. She had a big heart." Luis was the 11th of 12 children born to a land-owning family in the Philippines. As one of 11 girls, she learned early how to fend for herself. After graduating from the University of the Philippines, Luis went to Chicago in the late 1930s to study for an advanced degree in library science under a Carnegie scholarship. It was there that she met her husband, Anastacio Luis, who died in 1997. With the outbreak of World War II, the couple moved back to the Philippines, where Anastacio Luis was a scout for the U.S. Army. After the war, he served as a recruiter for the Hawai'i sugar industry, helping 6,000 Filipino laborers immigrate to the Islands. The Luises settled on the Big Island in 1946. "She re-invented herself in Hilo," said their only child, Leilani Luis Wilson, a retired attorney in California. When her mother couldn't find a job as a librarian, she went into social work. Rose Vierra, president of the 80-year-old Hilo Woman's Club, said Luis was "a strong leader" who served many terms as the group's historian as well as its president in 1964. She also helped develop the popular clubhouse on Lele Street. Retired newswoman Maxine Hughes described Luis as someone who never hid her beliefs and who demanded that women step up to the plate long before it was fashionable. Funeral arrangements have not been announced. Wilson said she is planning a memorial service for mid-May to allow out-of-state family members to attend. Dodo Mortuary is assisting with the arrangements. [Adv 2/5/2002]

Dr. Alfred C.S. Lum, a dental surgeon and leader in the Chinese community in Hawai'i, died Jan. 9, 2002. He was 99. Lum was born on Aug. 21, 1902 in Honolulu. When he was 1, he was sent to China to his ancestral village of Sun Wai, where he lived for 10 years before returning to Hawai'i. In 1926, Lum graduated from St. Louis School. He then joined an amateur baseball team in southern China that toured Asia. Lum returned to the Islands and worked for the Mutual Telephone Co., which later became known as Hawaiian Telephone. He left that job and attended the University of Hawai'i and the University of Southern California, where he completed his pre-dental schooling. In 1940, Lum received his doctor of dental surgery degree from Kansas City University. He practiced dentistry for two years in Kansas City before joining the staff at the Palama Settlement Carter Dental

Clinic. Lum went into private practice two years later and worked until the early 1990s. Lum was active in several Chinese community organizations and served as an officer with the Kong Chow Society, United Chinese Society, Chinese Chamber of Commerce and the See Yup Benevolent Society. Benjamin W.S. Lum of Glendale, Calif. — a Honolulu-born actor whose performing career was dominated by Los Angeles stage and screen credits — died Jan. 1, 2002 in Glendale. He was 48. Lum was in the local news most recently, however, because of personal tragedy instead of professional triumph: He made a plea at an August parole board hearing to extend the sentence of the man who murdered his mother. Ellen Lum was the 74-year-old woman who in 1994 was beaten in her lower Makiki home by Samson Kauhi. In September, the board extended the minimum prison term from 15 to 50 years. Benjamin Lum's happier pursuits were his quests, ultimately successful ones, for acting jobs. He is most closely allied with East-West Players, a Los Angeles acting company that is planning a "celebration of life" in Lum's honor at 11 a.m. Jan. 26 at its David Henry Hwang Theatre. Other credits include a regular role on the science-fiction series "The Privateers" and appearances on "ER," "NYPD Blue" and "Bette." He also had big-screen roles in "Perfect Game," "Firetrap," "Another 48 Hours" and other films. He has lived for more than 20 years in California, where he moved when he decided to switch careers from teaching in Hawai'i to acting in Hollywood. Ken Ordenstein is now a funeral director but had been friends with Lum since both were teachers at the Alternative Learning Center they helped establish at Central Intermediate School. "He was really good at one-to-one, very patient, very kind and also pretty outspoken," he said. "He was a terrific storyteller. It suited him well in both professions." Jim Nakamoto, who has directed many Hawai'i stage productions, met Lum when he was a sophomore who set foot in Nakamoto's McKinley High School drama class in 1968. Lum had been writing essays on growing up that he'd planned to perform. "I remember he sent me his first introduction on how he stepped into the whole drama room and a whole new world opened up," Nakamoto said. Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Tuesday at Hawaiian Memorial Park Mortuary, with visitation beginning at 9:30 a.m. and burial at 1 p.m. Attire is casual. In lieu of flowers, donations in his memory can be made to East-West Players, 120 N. Judge John Aiso St., Los Angeles, CA 90012. Survivors include his brothers, Michael and Vincent, and sisters, Patricia Chang and Roberta Fazande [Adv 12/1/2002]

Harold Luscomb Jr. - The Lyman House Museum will close Saturday to allow staff and volunteers to attend the funeral of Harold Luscomb Jr., a familiar figure in downtown Hilo who loved sharing the area's history with residents and visitors alike. Luscomb, a retired C. Brewer & Co. executive, died May 23 on O'ahu following heart surgery. He was 76. He was deeply involved in preserving Hilo's past as a volunteer at the Lyman House Museum and helped launch the East Hawai'i Historical Society five years ago. For the last 15 years, Luscomb could be spotted in his trademark blue-and-white palaka shirt, carrying a battery-powered speaker while conducting free daily tours of downtown Hilo on behalf of the museum, where he also served in the unpaid post of treasurer. Steve Todd, who also helped establish the East Hawai'i Historical Society, said Luscomb was "the guy who got us going and helped us keep it going. He was the glue of the group. He was the last to give up and he was so generous." Luscomb was born April 27, 1926, in Turtle Creek, Pa., but was reared in Hilo. "He was so proud of Hilo. This is a true loss," said Dolly Strazar, chief administrator of the Lyman House Museum. A funeral over ashes will start with visitation at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at Borthwick Funeral Home, followed by a service at 10:30 a.m. In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorial donations to the Lyman House Museum, Friends of the Library, or the Hawai'i Island Adult Care Center. Arthur Lyman, a world-class musician who played four-mallet vibraphones where most played two, died Sunday night at St. Francis Medical Center-West's hospice in 'Ewa. He turned 70 on Feb. 2, 2002. Lyman was known for "Yellow Bird," a tune that showcased his vibesmanship and bird calls. It stayed on the Billboard charts for 10 weeks, peaking at No. 4 in 1961, and was to become one of the signatures of the "exotic music" trend that originated in Hawai'i in the late 1950s and early '60s. "I can say that musically Arthur was the best in the Islands and maybe the world," said his long-time friend and colleague, Martin Denny, who recorded "Quiet Village" in 1959 with Lyman among the musicians aboard. "He had a keen ear for music and a great imagination, and I would say that his success and exposure paralleled mine. There were debates on who came first, but as far as I'm concerned we did it together." Lyman joined the group when he was about 21, said Denny, who regularly visited Lyman at the hospital. "Martin would take Arthur out in the sunshine and give a private show," said fan and friend Ricky Ornellas, who also visited Lyman. The musician was diagnosed with throat cancer last March, and chemotherapy left his throat parched and sore, said his daughter, Kapi'olani "Kappy" Lyman, who once sang in her father's act. "I visited (dad) for several weeks and returned home last Saturday after getting him a room with a window," said Kappy Lyman, who lives in Sacramento. "He had been unable to make bird calls since March. Harold Chang, a drummer and percussionist with Lyman for nearly 18 years, said "He was a one-of-a-kind talent who played beautiful music, whether it was Hawaiian, Japanese or classical." John B. Kramer, the bassist and other surviving musician in his group, called him "a gifted musician with a lot of talent who lived a good life." Kramer played guitar on the "Yellow Bird" recording and Chang played bass. Lyman's easygoing manner and musical prowess thrilled fans who saw him at the Shell Bar, Don the Beachcomber's and the old Canoe House, as well as in Mainland clubs. More recently he performed solo at the New Otani Kaimana Beach Hotel and the Waialae Country Club. He was married four times. "He was a typical local boy who surfed and paddled canoe, and he was equally proud of his paddling medals as he was of his music," said Kappy. A McKinley grad, Lyman was inducted into the school's Hall of Honor Nov. 16. He also is survived by two sons, Arthur "Ditto" Jr. and Aaron; his wife, JoAnn Lyman; sister Tweetie Rabi; brother Bill; and seven grandchildren. Hugh W. Lytle, a former Honolulu Advertiser editorial page editor and press secretary for Gov. William Quinn, died Friday Aug 15, 2002 at a senior residential home in Novato, Calif., at age 100. Lytle earned a Bronze Star during World War II for risking his life to obtain comprehensive accounts of Tenth Army operations on Okinawa. The Bronze Star citation reads: "His specialized professional and military skills, diligence, tact and efficiency, Maj. Lytle made contributions of material importance to the prosecution of the war against the Japanese." Those traits were also the basis of Lytle's notable contributions in journalism and public relations. "He was a strong and dynamic person," David Lytle of The Sea Ranch, Calif., said of his father. Lytle was the bureau chief for The Associated Press in Honolulu on Dec. 7, 1941. He reported for military duty the same day and was assigned to military intelligence. Lytle was later named chief of the Information and Historical Service on Okinawa. After the war, the New Philadelphia, Ill., native, went to work at The Advertiser, where he who wrote columns on the opinion page until the early 1960s. He joined the Quinn administration and later worked as a free-lance public relations consultant in Honolulu. Lytle retired to the Big Island in 1968; he moved to Novato in 1994. His second wife, the late Druzella "Drue" Lytle, was The Advertiser's women's section editor from 1953 until her retirement in 1969. Lytle is survived by his son, a grandson and two great grandchildren. At his request, there will be no funeral service and his ashes will be scattered at sea beyond the Golden Gate Bridge.
