Mayming Iris Quinsaats - Maui's first family of volleyball suffered another devastating loss during the weekend. The Quinsaats of Pa'ia, three generations of whom have been involved in the sport, are mourning the loss of Mayming Iris Quinsaats, 45, who died Saturday Jul 19, 2003 after a brain aneurysm. Two and a half years ago, Iris' brother, Paul Quinsaats, died unexpectedly of heart failure. He was 38. "It's so hard to see your two children go like that," said their mother, Pauline Quinsaats. Iris, who worked at the county Department of Parks and Recreation, had just earned her bachelor's degree in business administration in May from the University of Hawai'i, through Maui Community College. She also was looking forward to the September birth of her third grandchild. She was at the sand courts at Kanaha Beach Park in Kahului on July 6 with family members when she was overcome by a piercing headache and immediately underwent surgery at Maui Memorial Medical Center. She died Saturday after two weeks in a coma. Pauline Quinsaas, 65, said she is relying on her faith as a Jehovah's Witness to once again help her survive personal tragedy. Despite her grief, she said the untimely deaths of two of her seven children have not darkened her outlook. "Life is wonderful. Always be thankful, I always say," said Quinsaas, a woman of quiet determination who once chained herself to a milo tree in Pa'ia town to save it from being cut down. The Quinsaas for years were at the center of Maui's volleyball scene, running pick-up games and tournaments at the old Pa'ia Gym, just up the road from the sugar mill, and also taking their game to the beach. Along with in-laws and extended family, they ran the Maui Brothers men's volleyball club, which until the mid-1990s organized a popular summer tournament that attracted top teams from around the state. Pauline coached at Maui High and St. Anthony High School and was involved in club teams as her children and grandchildren grew up. She started the Na 'Opio O Maui youth volleyball club but retired from the sport five years ago. She said she always had one coaching tip that held throughout the years: "If you want to be a volleyball player, you have to play from here," she said, placing her hands over her heart. Son Paul Quinsaas was one of the island's top male players, and Iris was a regular on the court as well. Iris' son, Cory, was a standout volleyball player at Maui High School. Iris' sister, Norinne Suzuki, coaches girls volleyball at the Kamehameha Schools Maui Campus. UH Wahine volleyball star Nalani Yamashita is one of Norinne's daughters. Another daughter, Tania, played for the University of California Santa Barbara, while a third, Twaila, played at Hawai'i Pacific University. Another of Iris' brothers, Darren Quinsaas, was a player and former high school coach, and another sister, Dreanne Quinsaas, was one of Maui's top female players. Aside from the family's volleyball interests, the Quinsaas long have been a fixture in the former plantation town of Pa'ia. They own several properties in town, including the building that once housed Auggie's Pool Hall, run by Pauline's husband, Augustin. The pool hall closed several years ago, and the family now runs Aloha Island Shave Ice there. Visitation for Iris Quinsaas will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at Ballard Family Mortuary, with a service at noon. Cremation will follow. The family suggests that flowers be limited to lei only. Iris Quinsaas additionally is survived by sisters Sandra Lynn Quinsaas and Charlynn Ramolette, her grandfather, John K. Travis, and fiancé Michael Anderson. [Adv 22/07/2003]
